Navin Field, Detroit, Oct. 7.

For the first time in history Detroit holds a world's baseball championship. Overcoming a lead in the late innings to win, the Tigers ended the 1935 series by winning the sixth game from the Chicago Cubs.

Lefty Larry French carried the hope of a victory that would give the series standing and 3-all, Detroit looked to Tommy Bridges, right-handed master of the ball, to wind up the classic.

Thousands of 48,000 fans were in the stands.

Two singles and a double, after the Cubs had been retired in the first inning, Detroit seemed to assume a lead. With one out, Cochrane and Gehring singled, French popped out, but Pete Cogan came through with a base-line double that scored the manager. Rogell grounded out to end the first.

CHICAGO BLAST KILLS SIX EXPLOSION IN PAINT FACTORY INJURES TWENTY-EIGHT WORKERS.

Others Are Believed Trapped in Wreckage, While Many Were Spared by Being Out to Lunch.

(By The Associated Press.)
CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—Six persons were known to be dead and twenty-eight injured in a roaring explosion at the Glidden Soya Products Company on Chicago's West Side today.

The concern employs 230 persons and it was believed some were trapped in the blazing building, although no accurate check was immediately possible.

The known dead:
William Hargren, general superintendent of the Glidden soya products plant.
Samuel Van Gelder of suburban Arlington Heights.
Unidentified man, about 40.

The explosion occurred shortly before the noon hour so it was possible a majority of the employees were out of the building at lunch.

All available fire fighting equipment was rushed to the scene, and the neighborhood surrounding the plant became a bedlam of screaming sirens.

Six fire department ambulances were dispatched from neighboring stations, and fire fighting equipment came from all stations of that territory.

Mayor Edward J. Kelly and City Health Commissioner Herman N. Bunsen went immediately to the scene.

FIRST NUMBER IS ALTERED.
A surging sheet of flame enveloped the structure, puffing out the walls like paper and within a few minutes reduced most of the building to a pile of smoking ashes.

The probable death list was given first as twenty-five, as it was not known how many employees were in the building. Later it was established that probably forty were in the building at the time.

Adding the Glidden company are buildings housing the Nubian Paint and Varnish Company and the Holland Paint and Varnish Company subsidiaries. It was first reported the explosion occurred in those plants.

No one was injured at the Holland company, and the damage to the building consisted of broken windows. Both concerns are subsidiaries of the Glidden company. The latter concern has its headquarters in Cleveland. The Chicago official in charge is Adrian D. Joyce, vice-president.

Screaming ambulance and police sirens, the shouts of panic-stricken mothers and the moans of the injured caused a scene of indescribable confusion.

MAN STUNNED BLOCKS AWAY.
William F. Dozier, a laundry truck driver, said he was knocked to the ground three blocks away by the force of the explosion.

"I was stepping out of the truck," he said, "when there was a terrific explosion and I found myself on the pavement. I looked up and saw huge clouds of smoke coming from a building three blocks away. The sky was covered with flying wreckage. It looked to me as though a gigantic flock of ducks were flying by. I got up off the pavement and ran to the scene."

The blast rocked a territory almost a mile square. Freight cars on a siding adjoining the building were blown apart; several dozen motor cars parked in a lot nearby were flattened out; an aerial passageway leading from that building to several others and at least three small nearby brick buildings were destroyed.

Richard Bourgeois working on the second floor of an adjoining building, was knocked down and dazed by the blast. As he clambered to his feet, he said, screaming, blood-covered workers were staggering from the building. He said he saw one man lying on the ground with a 1-ton fly-wheel on top of him.

THE PLANT OPENED TODAY.
The plant was built a year ago at a reported cost of 1 million dollars. It was reopened today after having been closed three months while workers awaited the arrival of the 1935 soy beans.

Because of the secret machinery and the processes involved no one except workmen employed by the company was allowed in the building.

The plant was designed to distill oil for paint from the beans.

Fire Marshal Michael Corrigan said the explosion was probably due to either to an accumulation of gas or dust in the 3-story bean storage bin.

The explosion left little more to the building than a 30-foot pile of debris.

A UTILITIES TEST DROPPED.
The Burlington, Kas., Case Won't Be Carried to High Court.

(By The Associated Press.)
WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—One of the five new deal cases brought to the supreme court for review was withdrawn today.

It was filed by the Kansas Utilities Company to challenge the validity of a section of the industrial recovery act under which PWA was authorized to lend or give funds to municipalities to erect electric light plants and distributing systems.

When PWA made a contribution of $45,000 to Burlington, Kas., the Kansas Utilities Company, operating in approximately thirty cities in Southwestern Kansas, challenged the constitutionality of the act, but lost in the Kansas state courts.

In withdrawing its suit today the Kansas Utilities Company gave no explanation for its action.

IT'S SPEED AND PAY UP
JUDGE HOLLAND TALKS MONEY TO MOST OF 103 DRIVERS.

A Crowded Court, With Offenders All Around, Results From Police Activity to Promote Safety on Streets.

Few of the 103 cases of traffic violation considered today by Judge Thomas V. Holland in North Side court escaped without paying.

At an early hour the courtroom was crowded with offenders, witnesses and legal advisers, with a majority of the arrested motorists answering Judge Holland's summons to those desiring to enter guilty pleas.

A bit of humor was injected when H. F. Hayes, Fifty-fourth street and Blue River, stepped before the judge to face the charge of "running" a stop light on Lincoln boulevard and testified that he was having an argument with his wife and did not see the signal. He was released.

SOME CAUGHT IN TRAPS.
Some of the offenders were motorists caught early today in the go-to-work-hour traffic traps at Sixty-third street and Brookside boulevard, Thirty-first street and the Paseo, Forty-seventh and Main streets and Fifteenth street and Benton boulevard.

Harold Shaver, 620 East Seventy-first terrace, entered a plea of not guilty to a charge of speeding and "running" a traffic light. N. Emerson Paton, executive secretary of the South Central Business Men's Association, testified Shaver's car "jumped" a red light at Thirty-first street and Robert Gillham road. Paton said he pursued Shaver's car, which traveled at a speed of fifty-five miles an hour, to Thirty-ninth street and Gillham.

Paton was successful in stopping the Shaver car and said Shaver used abusive language. Shaver later was taken to the Country Club station.

Shaver was sentenced to sixty days at the municipal farm and his driver's license was revoked permanently.

SPEEDING IN SCHOOL ZONE.
Carroll L. Olsen, Independence, Mo., was fined $25 on a charge of driving forty-nine miles an hour in a school zone on Winner road.

Edwin Anderson, Negro, 1410 East Twelfth street, was fined $50 and his license revoked on a charge of careless driving and resisting an officer at Twelfth street and Tracy avenue.

Making a U-turn about twenty-five feet in front of a police car cost Adolph Brown, Negro, 2406 Tracy avenue, a cab driver, his driver's license and a $25 fine.

After an active part in the current campaign against speed as a district representative of the American Automobile Association, Denton Townsend, 7314 Euclid avenue, was arrested for driving forty-five miles an hour at Sixty-third street and the Paseo. Officers testified they clocked Townsend's car for six blocks. He was fined $5 in North Side court April 19, 1935, charged with driving fifty miles an hour. Today Townsend was fined $25 and lost his license for thirty days.

THERE, THEN GONE.
Garland Thomas, 2625 Chestnut, answered charges of careless driving and resisting arrest October 5 at Fifteenth street and Benton boulevard after driving through a stop light. Officers testified they took the keys of Thomas's car and when they returned in ten minutes he had gone. They returned a few minutes later to discover the car also missing. He later was arrested at a garage nearby. The charge of resisting arrest was dismissed. He was fined $10 for ignoring the stop light.

Charges of drunkenness and careless driving were faced by John Stubbins, 527 Thompson, Kansas City, Kansas. He was arrested after crashing into a truck at Independence boulevard and Cleveland avenue. He was sentenced to ninety days at the municipal farm.

Two others also were sentenced to the farm on charges of drunkenness and careless driving. They were Howard Preson, 1617 Elmwood avenue, sixty days, and Richard Fitzgerald, 3531 Woodland avenue, thirty days. Licenses of both were revoked permanently.

Those entering pleas of guilty were: John Bishop, 827 Huntington road; forty-seven miles an hour; $10 fine and 30-day license suspension.
Lyle W. Woodstar, 624 West Lexington avenue, Independence; fifty-one miles an hour; $15 fine and 30-day license suspension.

Arrie Crummitt, Turner, Kas.; forty-two miles an hour and careless driving; $25 fine and 30-day license suspension.
C. M. Moore, 2444 Lister avenue; forty-seven miles an hour; $10 fine and 30-day license suspension.

Howard Block, 1617 Elmwood avenue; forty-five miles an hour; $10 fine.
Joe Kershaw, 2122 East Thirty-third street; forty-eight miles an hour; $10 fine and 30-day license suspension.
Jack Wiswall, Neosho, Mo.; forty-five miles an hour; $15 fine.

Jerry Preger, 710 East Twenty-seventh street terrace; forty-two miles an hour; $10 fine and 30-day license suspension.
W. A. Smith, 6811 Lydia avenue; forty miles an hour; $10 fine and 30-day license suspension.

Resignation Rumor Is Denied by the Detroit Priest.

(By The Associated Press.)
DETROIT, Oct. 7.—The Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin denied widely-circulated reports today that he had resigned Sunday as pastor of the Shrine of the Little Flower because of dissatisfaction with the condition of the church's finances.

"I was talking as a pastor to his own people," Father Coughlin said. "I guess I scolded them a little about the church debt."

CHICAGO BABY IS LUCKY.

As "No. 10,000" at Hospital, He Wins $1,000.

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—If the tempo of his cries meant anything, a baby boy in the Lewis Memorial hospital told his mother today how he won Chicago's "baby race," which brought him a big bank roll, a college education for his more distant future, and a cardinal's blessing.

The baby, born to Mr. and Mrs. Albert O'Dowd last night, was "No. 10,000" at the hospital.

His birth at the opportune time carried a $1,000 purse, which was Cardinal Mundelein's idea some time ago. His eminence gave $500, and F. J. Lewis, the hospital's founder, matched his $500.

The city of Chicago, in the person of Mayor Edward J. Kelly, came forth with a christening robe. Cardinal Mundelein raised the ante with a promise of appropriate scholarships to cover the child's education.

HUSBAND WOUNDED IN HOME.
Police Report Says Wife Shot Nick Willard.

Nick Willard, 51 years old, 2015 Bellevue avenue, was shot in the left thigh today by his wife, Mrs. Ellen Willard, police reported.

Police, investigating, said Willard had been drinking; had an argument with his wife, and pushed her against a piano. The wife obtained the revolver from on top of the piano, according to the police. Frank Roche, 2017 Bellevue avenue, next door neighbor, was held for investigation, along with the wife, when police said they found the revolver in Roche's home, hidden in a paper sack. Willard was treated and left at home. His condition was not considered dangerous.

RUMOR OF PEACE OFFER

But Rome Denies Any Proposal and Addis Ababa Demands to Know Terms.

(Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.)

Addis Ababa, Oct. 7.—Ethiopian sources disclosed today that Emperor Haile Selassie plans to lead an army of 120,000 fighters into the field against Italy within two weeks.

This disclosure was made as rumors circulated in the capital that Italy has proposed peace terms to the emperor. One of the imperial advisers called the rumors "almost" true, but declined further comment.

(In Rome, Italian officials said peace terms were farthest from their thoughts.)

It was stated the emperor's personal army would have as its backbone 5,000 of his modernly equipped imperial guards.

The emperor was expected to take this force toward Dessye, which lies at a strategic middle distance in the triangle formed by Addis Ababa, Aduwa and Mount Mussa Ali. He was to proceed the first thirty miles from Addis Ababa on muleback, then to go by motor car.

An Army of Millions

Ethiopians said that within two weeks the emperor would have in his command a total of 600,000 well-armed warriors, plus 400,000 variously armed men.

The members of the Swedish military mission have resigned their commissions in the Swedish army in order to serve Haile Selassie.

Ras Desta Damtew, the son-in-law of the emperor, is leaving for Sidamo, Oga province, where he has been appointed commander of the southern forces totaling 1/4 million.

The Belgian military mission is leaving Addis Ababa tomorrow. Dadjazmatch Bayame Merid, another son-in-law of the emperor, with 40,000 men, is to co-operate with Desta Damtew in Oga.

Ras Emru, the emperor's cousin, with his 100,000 men, has been ordered to remain in reserve in Gojjam province.

The government today admitted officially that the Italians occupied Aduwa and Adigrat yesterday, saying the occupation was accomplished without resistance.

It was stated the evacuation of these two towns was made in an orderly manner according to a pre-arranged plan and that the Ethiopians now were stationed outside these points.

Aduwa's Loss Not Regretted

A government official said the occupation of Aduwa had no military significance and that in accordance with a long-standing plan, the Ethiopians intended to make their main stand in mountain positions which they consider impregnable forty miles south of Aduwa.

The Ethiopians themselves did not appear greatly impressed by the Aduwa occupation, since the village is League council's committee of thirteen.

"We have complete confidence in the wisdom and justice of the statesmen comprising the council, and they alone are able to terminate the unjust aggression of which Ethiopia became the victim even before the League's pacific solution to our differences was concluded," the statement said.

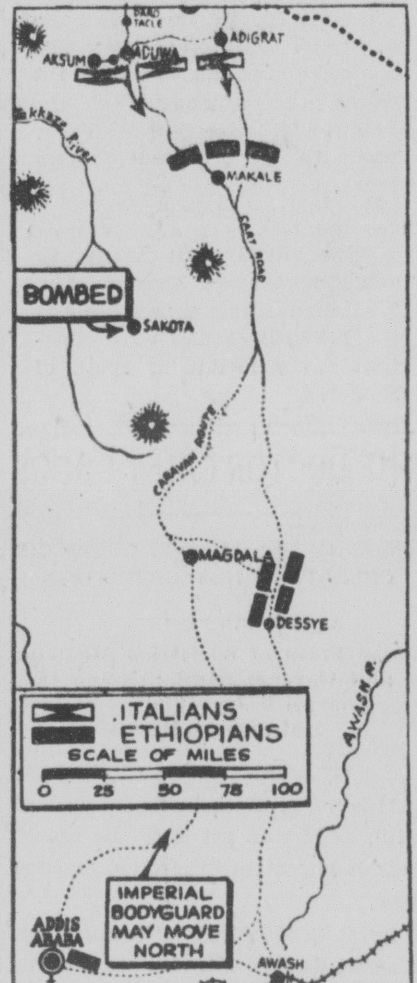

"Obliged to defend our territory, we remain loyally attached to the peace which is essential to that progress of our country which we undertook to achieve. We place all hope in the aid of the League, with which we wish further to collaborate on all circumstances within the framework of the covenant."

While some Ethiopians insisted Aduwa had been recaptured, the Italian legation, on the strength of news from Rome, celebrated the fall of the city.

The Italian minister thanked the emperor for the safe arrival and considerate treatment of consular officials from Debra Markos and Bessye.

Fear for Missing Italians. Vinci-Gigliucci asked the government to ascertain the whereabouts of the Italian commercial attaché at Makale, twenty miles from the Aduwa front, from whom he had heard no word for several weeks.

Vinci-Gigliucci also asked the authorities to locate the Aduwa consul, who disappeared after thanking

Ras Seyoum, governor of East Tigre province, for his kind treatment.

A grave situation arose between the Italian and Ethiopian governments owing to the unknown fate of the Italian consuls whom Mussolini ordered to leave Northern Ethiopia.

Italian legation officials said that if evil had befallen the consular officials, most serious consequences would follow, probably resulting in an ultimatum from Mussolini for their immediate delivery.

Two major counter offensives by the Ethiopian northern and southern armies against advancing Fascist forces appeared in prospect today.

Military observers anticipated hourly the opening guns of the campaigns from the precipitous heights around Makale, in the north, twenty miles from the fallen city of Aduwa, and from the low-lying desert region about Oga province, in the south.

The Ethiopians were jubilant over the stubborn, 3-day defense of Aduwa against Italy's heavy guns and planes, a feat which led one of the emperor's aids to exclaim:

"It took the Italians three days to take little Aduwa. It would take them thirty years to take Ethiopia." Ethiopia's general mobilization has

How the Armies Line Up in Ethiopia

The positions of the military forces opposing each other on Ethiopian soil today were as follows:

Northern or Eritrean, Italian army—Concentrated in the region of Aduwa, with the sharpest penetration of Ethiopian territory about twenty-five miles south of the Eritrean-Ethiopian border. Ethiopian forces were believed to be concentrating a few miles south of this point.

Central Italian army—At Mussa Ali, just inside the pocket where Eritrea, French Somaliland and Ethiopia converge.

Southern Italian army—At Gerlogubi, not far from the border of Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland.

Ethiopian forces of only negligible size were operating against the central and southern armies. One of the major Ethiopian troop concentrations was at Dessye, about 100 miles south of Aduwa and roughly on a line between Aduwa and Addis Ababa.

PLEA FOR ITALIAN MERCY.

Diplomats Ask That Addis Ababa Be Spared Bombing.

By H. R. KNICERBOCKER.
(Copyright, 1935, by International News Service.)

Addis Ababa, Oct. 7.—American intervention, together with other powers represented here, to stave off dreaded Italian air raids on Addis Ababa and Direwawa, was asked today by the diplomatic corps after official news was received of the capitulation of Aduwa.

Ministers of eight nations decided that, acting individually, they would ask their home governments to appeal direct to Premier Mussolini, asking him not to bomb these two defenseless cities.

Pointing out that Addis Ababa has 6,000 and Direwawa 2,000 neutral foreign residents, Cornelius Van H. Enghert, the American consul, and his colleagues dispatched telegrams to Washington and other capitals.

Ministers from Great Britain, France, Germany, Belgium, Greece, Turkey and Egypt participated in the move.

Dispatches from the northern front, delayed for more than twenty-four hours by broken communications, finally brought the news today that both Aduwa and Adigrat had fallen.

A communique issued after the news came through contained the text of a telegram to the League of Nations, obviously intended to take the wind out of Mussolini's triumph. "We do not appeal to the League any more; we just inform it of every important change," said the government's announcement.

Part of the information passed on to Geneva was the statement that "Ethiopia has not yet begun to fight."

Without explaining the discrepancy in the statement that Ethiopia was not fighting, and previous official accounts of a battle raging in the north, the communique stated that Aduwa and Adigrat had been evacuated voluntarily by the Ethiopians.

"Ethiopian troops have not yet gone into action," it was reaffirmed. This was taken as an attempt to create the impression that the emperor's original plan to evacuate Aduwa without fighting was carried out.

As trophies from the north, nevertheless, Ethiopian airplanes are bringing to Addis Ababa an Italian major and two Italian native officers as prisoners, it was officially announced.

The prisoners, together with several captured Italian machine guns, are meant to show the emperor and the people the success of the Ethiopians' bare-handed valor.

One or more Italian tanks have also been captured, according to reports.

According to the authoritative Ethiopian account, what happened at Aduwa was this:

Emperor Haile Selassie from the beginning ordered Ras Seyoum, his commander in that sector to fall back, not engaging the Italians, and let them take Aduwa.

Then the Ethiopians were ordered to occupy the surrounding hills and harass the Italians.

Ras Seyoum was only given 22,000 men, most of them equipped with some of the oldest rifles in the Ethiopian armory.

Ras Seyoum, however, instead of falling back, held off the Italians for four days.

The emperor telegraphed Ras Seyoum several times, asking him to obey, and finally sent him a very sharp message threatening to recall him.

Ras Seyoum then yielded on Saturday night and the Italian forces, noting the withdrawal, advanced at dawn Sunday and occupied the city.

THE DRIVE MAY SLACKEN.

ROME, Oct. 7.—An Italian government spokesman said today Italy's troops would consolidate their quick-won positions in Northern Ethiopia.

opia, and might not advance as spectacularly for the next few days as they did during their drive on Aduwa.

Fascist sentiment at home backed the army in its program of making sure of holding Aduwa, scene of Italy's humiliating defeat in 1896.

Crowds which marched behind a band playing patriotic music last night bore banners proclaiming: "Aduwa Italian again," "Aduwa Italian forever," "Aduwa today, Addis Ababa tomorrow."

Demonstrations throughout the kingdom reflected the nation's rejoicing over the capture of Aduwa. In many cities the demonstrations were linked to manifestations of friendship with France.

Masses gathered in front of the French consulate and raised up vivas for France and Premier Laval, together with their cheers for Italy, Premier Mussolini and the Italian army in Africa.

The United States' arms embargo caused Italy no anxiety, officials said, because this nation had not been buying arms from America. They observed cheerfully on the other hand, that President Roosevelt's proclamation of the embargo would mean no arms from America for Ethiopia.

Peace terms for Ethiopia, Italian officials said today, are farthest from their thoughts.

A government spokesman laughed at the idea that Italians had suggested terms to Emperor Haile Selassie, asserting: "Our campaign has just started."

Officially there is no war, Luigi Vinci-Gigliucci, Italian minister to Ethiopia, is still in Addis Ababa and the Ethiopian charge d'affaires remains in Rome.

Bombs Force Captors of Official in Aduwa to Flee.

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMY IN ETHIOPIA (VIA ASMAR TO ROME), Oct. 6.—(Sunday)—The Italian consul at Aduwa, S. Franca, who had been a prisoner of the Ethiopians since the outbreak of hostilities, escaped to Eritrea today.

Franca made his escape when bombs from the plane of Count Ciano, son-in-law of Premier Mussolini, fell upon Aduwa, forcing his guards to flee.

WIS B. ELY DIES WHEN CAR
CRASHES AND BURNS ON ROAD.

Sudden impulse to return home from Lincoln, Mo., farm leads to a tragic accident on highway.

Sudden impulse to return home
from a farm in rural Missouri resulted in the death of Lewis
B. Ely, 49 years old, president of B. Ely & Co., general insurance agent, and president of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association.
Ely's Buick coupe overturned on curve near Lincoln, Mo., about 100 miles southeast of Kansas City, and caught fire.

Identification was made possible by the license number on the car. Police authorities at Lincoln telephoned the Kansas City police about 3:30 o'clock this morning.
They in turn notified the family.
Verne Ely, 22 years old, a son,
C. J. Patterson left immediately for Lincoln.

TO A FRIEND'S FARM.

Mr. Ely lived at 7341 Ward parkway. He left Kansas City Saturday morning to spend the week-end on the farm of Harry E. Lunsford, near Lincoln. Mrs. Ely and Robert Verne intended first to accompany him, but then decided to remain in Kansas City.

According to a telephone conversation with Mr. Lunsford, Ely returned early last night. Yielding to an impulse, he decided to return home, arose, dressed and left the house about 10:20 o'clock. No other cars had been received. Mrs. Ely learned today that her husband was killed in night driving by light fog.

The son went to the scene of the accident early today with friends and found the markings on the highway made by the machine in which his father met death. He related to friends after returning that his father apparently had started slipping on the wet pavement. Evidently he was in the machine, the son said, his father may have done
so. Tracks on the pavement indicated the car left the highway into a ditch on the left side and crossed back to the right side where it turned over, struck a culvert and was upended again, after which it rolled over on its side.

President of the First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Kansas City and Western Shares, 102 East Ninth street, Mr. Ely spent much of his time to the savings and loan business. Both organizations succeeded to Western Savings Loan Association by conversion under the Home Owners' Loan Corporation act of 1933.

HERE TWENTY-TWO YEARS.

Mr. Ely also headed a general insurance agency in Kansas City bearing his name. He was a member of the Kansas City Club, a vestryman of St. Andrew's Episcopal church and a member of the Ararat Shrine temple.
He had been in business in Kansas twenty-two years.

Mr. Ely for many years was associated with William Mann in the insurance business. Mr. Mann, insurance agent, then

AT THE MEDICAL CONFERENCE.

Dr. Arthur C. Christie of Washington, left, is greeted by Dr. Ira H. Lockwood, director of clinics at the thirteenth annual fall conference of the Kansas City Southwest Clinical Society, which opened for four days today at the Hotel President. Dr. Christie, an X-ray man interested in medical economics, will talk on "Medical Care for All the People at Prices They Can Afford" tonight at a public meeting at Ararat temple. Dr. Albert Soland of Los Angeles will speak on cancer, and Dr. Harlow Brooks of New York on heart disease at the same meeting.

lions to get medical aid that they need but can't afford. Then we would keep all our doctors busy."

He suggested the appointment by organized doctors of permanent committees to study socialized medicine to the general end that the citizenry could afford optimum, not a minimum, of medical advice and care.

TIME PAYMENTS FOR FEES.

Dr. Christie, who spoke on cancer of the breast at the morning session, explained in an interview that the Washington medical plan avoids
"health insurance" and "state medicine" and provides ways of allowing doctors to help a larger group of patients charged moderate fees over a time payment plan.

First, a group hospitalization plan was developed by representatives of the medical society, the community chest and the hospitals of Washington," he said. "It has 10,000 members and is on a sound financial basis. An employed person can assure himself twenty-one days' hospitalization a year by paying $9 a month. This does not include cost of medical care."
"Next, a central admitting bureau for hospitals was formed, and is controlled by representatives of the medical society, the hospitals and the community chest. The bureau passes on all persons in need of aid in paying for hospitalization or doctors' services.

AIDS THOSE WHO CAN'T PAY.

"In addition, the medical and dental societies of the city set up a medical and dental service bureau, housed in the same building as the central admitting bureau. The medical and dental service bureau arranges for installment payments based on the patient's ability to pay, within a reasonable time, a year at most.

"Finally, a reserve fund is created out of which creditors may be reimbursed and a patient's expenses met that are far beyond his capacity to pay.

"The plan also includes close cooperation with the public health department in the prevention of disease.

"The plan works without disturbing the essential personal relationship between patient and doctor, without destroying initiative, without establishment of a government bureaucracy and tax burden."

"NOT A DEATH WARRANT."

Cancer When Young Can Be Stopped in Time, Clinic Is Told.

An intelligent fear of cancer is the beginning of wisdom, and a morbid or unreasoning and deadly fear of it is as bad as cancer itself.

So Dr. Albert Soland of Los Angeles puts it. He is a radiologist who diagnoses and treats cancers, and is a guest speaker at the fall conference of the Kansas City Southwest Clinical Society.

"I'd say 50 per cent of our present serious cancer cases could have been nipped if the patients had gone sooner to their doctors when a growth, a sore, a lump, ulcer or abrasion didn't disappear," he repeats.

"Consult your doctor promptly.
Cancer is not a death warrant when it is young. It is not a shameful ill that brands you as incurable. Caught in time, it can be stopped."

The muddle as to the cause of cancer, and cure of its advanced stages, is as thick as ever, Dr. Soland added. There is nothing on the medical map that points to a dependable cure for the disease in advanced stage. The scores of earnest attempts to learn what cancer really is and how to kill it have largely come to naught. It remains a mystery.

"We think it is a disease of breakdown, as well as being in part hereditary in tendency," Dr. Soland said. "General physical well-being we believe discourages the growth of cancerous cells. Children seldom have it because, we think, their bodies are young, strong and resistant.
Their cells are full of life that fights
the cancerous attack on cells not so lively."

"In general, then, we advise middle-aged and elderly people to keep as fit physically as they can, and to see their family doctor early if sores, lumps or abrasions don't heal promptly, no matter on what part of the body. Surgery and X-ray can eradicate a small local cancer before it has spread its plague into the blood stream."

FACES AN ASSAULT CHARGE.

Edward D. Culbertson Freed on Bond in Carl Munden Shooting.

Charges of assault with intent to kill Carl Munden, 412 West Eleventh street, were filed today against Edward D. Culbertson, 35 years old, 501 West Thirty-first street. Culbertson pleaded not guilty before Justice Edward J. Noonan and posted $7,500 bond pending a preliminary hearing October 23.

The shooting resulted from a quarrel involving Culbertson, Carl Munden and the latter's brother, and was said to have been over Miss Florence Munden, a sister of the brothers. Culbertson and Miss Munden were living at the apartment, the police were told following the quarrel that ended with the shooting of Carl Munden.

Carl Munden is in the General hospital, where he had a restless night last night, but is expected to recover unless complications develop.

L. Carpenter, 34, arrested Saturday at Neosho, Mo., had admitted participa-

uary 5, 1933.

Carpenter, who, Joe Anderson, state trooper, asserted was an associate of Harry Campbell, reputed Alvin Kar-ties as public enemy No. 2, was brought here yesterday and placed in tacular robberies in Kansas and Okla-

HE'S A 'PERFECT RECRUIT'

CHARLES H. PETEFISH SCORES 100
IN ALL RATINGS.

While His IQ Is Slightly Below
That of Vincent B. Weston, His Physical and Mental Rating Is Higher.

The "perfect recruit" has been found.

His name is Charles Huff Petefish,
20-year-old farm youth from Webb City, Mo., who today joined the United States navy at the recruiting station in the federal building. Young Petefish scored 100 per cent physical and mental rating, the first to do so in many years.

Lieut. Com. C. L. Beschling of the navy medical corps and acting commander of the recruiting station, discovered only one possible flaw in young Petefish's makeup, or perhaps one should say three, the imperfec-tions being fillings in three teeth.

DON'T HAVE TO EAT ENEMY.
"But of course," the recruiting officer said, "his teeth are in perfect condition now, so I can't hold those three teeth against him. We don't have to eat the enemy."

Young Petefish was graduated three years ago from the Albia, Mo., high school and since that time has been working on his father's farm near Webb City. He is 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighs 152 pounds, and has blue eyes and blond hair.

His tests showed he spoke Spanish and English almost equally well and had a remarkable alertness of mind.

RECALLS YOUNG WESTON.

His case brings to mind that of 17-year-old Vincent Burton Weston, who recently earned an intelligence quotient (IQ) rating of 100 at the recruiting station. While Petefish didn't have as high an IQ rating, he surpassed the younger man in both the physical and general mental tests.

Weston was sent from here to California, where he was assigned to the U. S. S. Colorado. At present he is studying in preparation for the United States Naval academy, Annapolis, Md.

A NEW PROBATION OFFICER.

Earl F. Beckett Is Named by Judge
Reeves and Judge Otis.

The appointment of Earl F. Beckett, social agency official, as probation officer in the United States probation office here, was announced today by Judge Albert L. Reeves and Judge
Merrill E. Otis of the federal court.

Associated with the Kansas City Council of Social Agencies two years,
Mr. Beckett was a teacher of science and mathematics at the Kemper Military school, Boonville, Mo., from 1913 to 1932. He previously did electrical educational work in Pittsburgh, Pa., and was with a motor car firm in De-

Grocers Should Be in Church Sundays, Ministers Say.

A resolution urging the Retail Grocers Association and city officials to enforce strictly the law requiring grocery stores to remain closed on Sunday, in order that proprietors might attend Bible classes and church services, was adopted unanimously today by the Kansas City Ministerial Alliance, meeting in the Y. M. C. A. building.

The resolution, submitted by the Rev. Alvin G. Hause, pastor of Bales Avenue Baptist church, read in part,
"We deplore the tendency of our times to rob the church of one day in seven, set aside for worship and prayer and meditation, and we call back our people to this day as a Lord's day and thus aid the cause of Christianity by preserving Sunday for the propagation of the gospel."

AWAIT INVADERS IN HILLS

ETHIOPIANS ALSO PLAN A STUBBORN DEFENSE IN DESERT.

The Fall of Aduwa Falls to Cause Great Gloom in Addis Ababa—A Festival in Capital.

By LAURENCE STALLINGS. Copyright, 1935, by the North American Newspaper Alliance (The Kansas City Star and other newspapers).

ADDIS ABABA, Oct. 7.—Aduwa, scene of Emperor Menelik's historic victory over the Italians in 1896, and Axum, mysterious crowning place of the ancient Greek dynasty of Ethiopia, have been lost to a modernized enemy, but the Ethiopians are not disheartened.

Addis Ababa has taken the news of the Italian capture of the northern towns with its usual equanimity and, as part of Emperor Haile Selassie's strategic plan, has continued its labor of spreading eucalyptus leaves over its roofs and over the few precious airplanes possessed by the Ethiopian forces.

The Italians met much stiffer resistance than they expected before Aduwa, and, for all their artillery, machine guns, tanks and planes, the tigerish Tigrians fought them stubbornly with 40-year-old rifles and long, stabbing spears.

DEFENDERS INTO HILLS. Ras Seyoum, blue-blooded mountain warlord of the province of the Tigre, has fallen back to his mountain fastnesses to make another stand against the Italian invaders under conditions that will be much more difficult for them than were encountered in the attacks on Aduwa and on Adigrat.

Early Italian victories along the borders, both north and south, were expected by the Ethiopians. Ras Seyoum's fierce warriors and tribesmen in other sectors are asking only for a chance to draw the Italians into the interior, through desert and mountain country, and then, they assert, the fight will be more even.

There was a merchants' festival in Addis Ababa today, and all Ethiopian caravans thought worthy to fight against the wild strains of native music, at noon they visited the palace and invited Haile Selassie to partake of a great raw meat feast.

READY TO ACT AS GUIDES. The merchants, clad in their black silk mantles, bowed not of their wares, but of their prowess as guides. They told the emperor they knew every mule track, every feverish valley and every parched mountain in Ethiopia and could lure the Italians to their doom, while Ethiopia's warriors pushed on to victory in the rich lands of Eritrea, where the merchants long had traded.

While his subjects still grumble in the streets about the "farangi" (foreigners), the emperor is doing everything possible to protect the white population of the capital, especially the Italians.

Practically the last Italian subjects in Ethiopia, except for legation and consular officials, have now left Addis Ababa by rail for Djibouti, French Somaliland.

MOVE TO STOP STRIKES

TOLEDO EXPERIMENTS SIX MONTHS WITH "PEACE PLAN."

A Board of Eighteen Hears Grievances of Both Sides and Offers a Settlement Acceptable to All.

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—For the last three months, and the three to come, the "Toledo peace plan" for industrial disputes has been, and will be, closely watched by labor leaders and industrialists.

The plan came to life July 16 at Toledo, O., fathered by Edward P. McGrady, assistant secretary of labor, as a method to calm the labor wars which were upsetting the manufacturing communities of Northern Ohio.

If it continues to prove a success, after further tests at Toledo which should consume no more than an additional three months' time, Mr. McGrady is planning to aid in creating similar boards in twenty-seven other cities from which he now has queries.

CIVIC LEADERS ON BOARD. The "peace plan" is a conciliation method to avert strikes and lockouts where employers and employees have reached an impasse. The medium used is a board of eighteen civic leaders which attempts to assist the antagonistic groups to some mutually satisfactory settlement. In the three months of its life, the Toledo board has prevented two strikes and settled four aggravated labor disputes before they arrived at the strike or lockout stage.

The plan grew out of the common desire both among workers and employers to bring to a close the labor wars which had peppered the map of Northern Ohio during 1933-34. In that period more than 500 strikes had taken place in the area, McGrady says. Rioting, property damage, injuries and death followed in the wake, to say nothing of wages lost to the striking workers and disrupted production schedules in the factories.

SUFFER FINANCIAL LOSSES. Consternation came to a head in Toledo where several violent labor disputes broke. Newspaper publishers and editors called McGrady into conference and asked aid to forestall further violence. They told of financial losses suffered by both Cleveland and Toledo, where several plans for new factories had been abandoned by capitalists who feared labor unrest in the two cities.

McGrady proposed, and had approved, what is now known as the "Toledo peace plan." He believes that it can avert 90 per cent of all strikes and lockouts if properly administered. It is a probability, officials say, the plan will be adopted in so many other cities that it will become, in effect, a national program.

The board, as organized in Toledo, includes eighteen men who are recognized and trusted civic leaders. It includes six representatives each for labor, manufacturers and the public.

AIR GRIEVANCES SEPARATELY. When a strike or lockout threatens, a subcommittee of the board invites representatives of both the factory management and the workers to air their grievances alone before the committee. When the difficulties are understood, the two factions are brought together before the committee which offers some mutually acceptable plan.

Nothing about the procedure is compulsory. Neither side is compelled to send representatives before the board. Neither side is forced to return for a joint meeting, nor does it have to accept the plan offered. But the Toledo board usually has found that both employers and employees feel they have much to gain.

Now McGrady plans to appoint an executive secretary to the Toledo board who will act as chairman, and who will be paid for three months by the United States labor department.

COURT IN BRIEF SESSION

FIRST MEETING IN NEW EDIFICE IS ADJOURNED QUICKLY.

A Crowd Turns Out to Witness Start of 8-Month Term That Is Expected to Make Political History.

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—A brief session, bereft of ceremony, today started the supreme court on a new 8-month term expected to affect 1936 election issues and have an important bearing on whether a constitutional amendment is sought to enlarge federal powers over commerce.

Assembling for the first time in its 11½-million-dollar palatial edifice—the first home of its own in 146 years—the court received a few motions, admitted more than 100 attorneys to practice, and adjourned until next Monday. Then the real work will begin.

THE ROOM IS FILLED. When the nine justices, wearing black robes, filed solemnly through three crimson-draped entrances, they saw a packed marble-columned chamber filled to its 300-seat capacity.

Hours before the noon convening time, persons were lined up waiting a chance to enter the chamber. Many were unable to get in. The justices put on robes in the robing room at the rear of the court, having entered the building through a private garage, and reached the room by a private elevator removed from the crowd. In the old days in the capitol building, it was necessary for them to elbow their way through the throngs which filled the corridors.

Headed by Marshal Green, the members, with Justice Hughes leading, entered the courtroom behind a heavy plush curtain at the rear of the bench, and, dividing into groups of three, went onto the bench. All in the courtroom stood.

NO VISIT TO WHITE HOUSE. After the crier had delivered his "oyez, oyez," admonishing all with business to give their attention, the court and the audience took their seats and the session was opened. The court received several motions, then took a recess until next Monday.

Members of the families of the justices occupied reserved seats in the room, while in the audience were many persons prominent in Washington official circles.

Due to the absence of President Roosevelt, now on a Pacific cruise, the justices omitted their customary visit to the White House on opening day.

CRUSHED BETWEEN CARS. CARROLLTON, Mo., Oct. 7.—(A. P.)—William Crawford, 55, Carroll County farmer, was killed last night when a motor car driven by Louis Hubbard, Bosworth, Mo., crashed into him as he stood on a highway in the rear of his motor car.

endant of Sicilian kings, who will be married in Rome October 12 to Infante Juan, third son of ex-king Alfonso of Spain and heir to the throne which his ancestors occupied hundreds of years. Her father, the Infante Carlos de Bourbon, a major officer in the king's army, died in her family, like that of her fiancé, lived in exile since the Spanish revolution four years ago.

GOWN OF SILVER LAME.

With her approaching marriage to the prince, the limelight has shown her blond head. The gown Worth designed for her wedding, which will be attended by royalties and Spanish archbishops, is worthy of a queen. It is fashioned of silver lame with big flared and a long court train of the same shimmering fabric. But her veil is a simple classic model of white tulle held with a band of orange blossoms. Its only variation being a narrow band of silver braid down the sides.

For the wedding the princess's mother, the Infanta Louise, will wear a Barton gown of brown and silver lame designed with a long trained skirt and topped by a cape of brown velvet bordered in sable. Her two sisters will be gowned in a soft rather light shade of blue. Princess Dolores's frock is blue velvet finished with a belt of silver kid studded with blue stones and worn with a little blue velvet hat, while the gown of Princess Maria de la Esperanza is blue crepe accompanied by a wide brimmed hat of the same shade of blue.

SATIN AND VELVET.

Included in the bride's trousseau are two simple but regal evening frocks.
One is of silver grey satin designed with a short train and detachable sleeves. The other is of brown velvet with decollete edged in a role of henna velvet.

For the honeymoon—a six months' tour around the world, which will include a trip across the United States—Barton has designed for the princess a traveling frock of light blue wool with a belt of dark blue reptile skin topped by a simple dark blue wool coat untrimmed by fur.

Her afternoon clothes include a high necked frock of brown satin and a dress of black crepe with a belt formed by a gilded feather, which will be worn with a knee length coat of black astrakhan.

suits of men's clothing and eight dresses were taken from the store by intruders, who broke the glass in the transom over the front door to gain an entrance.

Harold Steinitz, 321 Ward parkway, manager of the store, said that he believed the theft was late Saturday night. The men's suits were valued at $25 each.

After breaking through a rear kitchen window thieves yesterday ransacked the home of Arthur A. Heg-gen, 925 East Seventy-sixth street terrace of clothing and jewelry valued at $260.

Jewelry valued at $39 and $40 in cash were taken from the home of Paul Froehlich, 611 West Forty-fourth street, after entrance had been made through a bedroom window.

Eleven gas heaters, valued at $110, were missing today from an apartment house rented September 27 by the A. A. Chamberlain Realty Company to a woman who gave her name as Mrs. I. Ketter. The apartment house, located at 1202 Troost avenue, had not been visited by representatives of the company since its rental.

A check which Mrs. Ketter gave in payment of rent returned, arousing the suspicion of the realtors. Mrs.
Ketter could not be found.

Jewelry and clothing valued at $50 were taken from the apartment of Ernest Grimbale, 1412 Central street, and motor car accessories and tools to the value of $85.25 from the office of the C. A. Brockett Cement Company, 2035 East Nineteenth street, over the week-end.

Two cases of eggs and a pay telephone were the loot that thieves gathered from the Brooklyn Produce Company, 2041 East Eighteenth street.
Clothing and traveling bags valued at $60 also disappeared from the motor car of E. B. Isenhardt, 414 East Eighth street, while it was parked on the street at Missouri avenue and Main street last night.

SCIENTISTS SEEK SECRETS OF THE "RIVER OF NO RETURN."

Hazardous Journey Is Undertaken in a Scow Under Auspices of National Geographic Society—A 350-Mile Trip.

SHOUP, IDAHO, Oct. 7.—With youthful Congressman D. Worth Clark of Idaho as assistant cook, a party of intrepid adventurers and scientists were sailing down the treacherous and beautiful Salmon River today on a hazardous journey from this city to Lewiston, Idaho, 350 miles away.

Long known as "the river of no return" because those who sail down its swirling waters cannot return either by foot or by boat, the Salmon River divides the state of Idaho and thus far has defied engineers who have studied possibilities of piercing its secrets with railroads and highways.

THE TRIP IN A SCOW.
The expedition down the scenic gorge is being made in a scow under the command of two veteran rivermen, Capt. Monroe Hancock and John Cunningham. The hazardous enterprise is being sponsored by the United States National Geographic Society to permit scientists of the United States geological survey and the national forest service to study mineral deposits and animal and plant life and to obtain pictures.

Besides Mr. Clark and the two scowmen the party includes A. W. Fahrenwald, dean of the Idaho school of mines; Dr. J. Shenon and Dr. John O. Reed of Washington, members of the United States geographical survey and coleaders of the expedition; Maynard Williams, chief of the national geographic's foreign editorial staff, and Howard R. Flint of Missoula, Mont., a representative of the United States forestry service.

Contact with the outside world

during the 30-day trip through the virgin wilderness, first discovered by Lewis and Clark a century ago, will be maintained through the use of a short wave radio. One scheduled contact with civilization during the long trip is planned at Riggins, Idaho. From that point on the dash down the roaring canyon of foaming water will be through country seldom seen by white men.

LIFE AS IN THE PAST.

In the canyon towering walls will lock them off from a civilization of motor cars and modern industry. They will see life as it was a thousand or more years ago. Great, shaggy mountain goats, menacing bears and timid deer will watch their progress. Overhead eagles will soar with, perhaps, the only civilized touch, an airplane circling far above to make pictures of the expedition's progress. At one point in the canyon the party will come upon the last band of "uncivilized" Indians in the United States. They are the Sheepster Indians of the Salmon River Gorge. Until a few years ago, when the first river expedition was made, their existence was unknown. Locked away from the world, the Indians migrated to their canyon home, where game and fish abound, years ago. Here they live by "the river of no return," impossible to move downstream in their frail canoes or to return upstream.

The phosphate resources in French Northwest Africa are among the greatest in the world.

ASKS A CONSTITUTION CHANGE.

Court Test for Laws Before They Become Effective Proposed.

(By the Associated Press.)

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 7.—Governor Harold G. Hoffman, a Republican, proposed today that the federal Constitution be amended to provide that all laws be submitted to the supreme court to test their constitutionality before they become effective.

In an open letter to Henry Fletcher, chairman of the Republican national committee, Governor Hoffman contended his proposed amendment would "remove from American life the uncertainty as to the political future which now paralyzes ambition and enterprise."

HUNT KILLER OF GIRL, 7

SEATTLE CHILD WAS ATTACKED AND HANGED FROM DOOR.

Police Attribute the Crime to a Degenerate—A 51-Year-Old Man Is Held for Questioning by Detectives.

(By the Associated Press.)
SEATTLE, Oct. 7.—A sadistic killer, who hanged 7-year-old Sally Kelley in a garage door behind her grandmother's apartment home, was sought here today by police.

Investigating officers said the girl, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kelley, was slain last night. Corner Otto H. Mittlestadt and Detective Ernest Yoris, after an autopsy was performed, attributed the killing to a degenerate.

Captain Yoris announced detectives had taken into custody for questioning a 51-year-old man. He did not disclose details of the arrest.

HANDKERCHIEF IS MAIN CLUE.
Detectives had as their main clue a man's large handkerchief which was tightly knotted around Sally's neck and lashed to a metal knob on the garage door when two patrolmen discovered her body.

The grandmother, Mrs. Alfred Coolidge, called police after the child disappeared from a hallway in which she was playing. Mrs. Coolidge also notified the parents.

Four hours later patrolmen investigating the crime, opened one of the doors, and the body, knees touching the ground, came into view.

Captain Yoris said the autopsy showed she had been criminally attacked, probably elsewhere than in the garage, struck a savage blow on the head and then strangled. As the girl was found in the hallway, the body was taken some distance away and then returned to the garage, possibly dead or unconscious.

HER MOTHER DOESN'T KNOW.
While officers and volunteers searched through the neighborhood, searching for the slayer, the mother was kept in ignorance of her daughter's death.

Detectives began a vigorous questioning of residents in the neighborhood. The officers said one man, whose name was not disclosed, reported he had visited the garage about 8 o'clock, and the body was not there at that time.

A rumor being investigated was that residents of the neighborhood saw her being driven past his home in a motor car.

Sally's father is a member of a pharmaceutical firm.

Besides her parents, she is survived by a baby brother.

BATTLE TO A FATHER'S CLUB.

The fathers' club of the Frances Willard school will hold open house at 7:45 o'clock tomorrow night in the school auditorium, 5015 Garfield avenue. H. Roe Bartle, Boy Scout executive, will speak.

THOMPSON HORSES AT ROYAL.

Entries Probably Will Be Exhibited by Other Riders.

Frank H. Servatius, secretary of the American Royal Live Stock Show, said today the entries of Mrs. A. C. Thompson, injured yesterday at the national horse show at Bartlesville, Ok., probably would be exhibited by other riders and trainers in the fall show here. However, no word yet has been heard from Mrs. Thompson, who was taken in a chartered plane to a Chicago hospital. Mr. Servatius said it was the usual custom to substitute other handlers in such cases.

The entry of Miss Frances M. Dodge, daughter of the late John F. Thompson, pioneer motor car builder and a leading exhibitor in the East, was received today by show officials. Miss Dodge, who bought a Longview Farm horse here last October for $4,750, will make her first appearance as an exhibitor in Kansas City.

Miss Dodge reserved twenty box stalls and will show hackney horses and ponies, Shetland ponies and 3- and 5-gaited saddle horses.

Other new entries are Frank Belcher, Bellbrook stables, Pine Valley, Cal., reserving ten box stalls and showing roadsters, hackney horses and 3- and 5-gaited horses, and Louis Kaiser, Terre Haute farm, Bethel Conn., reserving eleven box stalls and showing hackney ponies and 3- and 5-gaited saddle horses.

NEW MADRID MAN IS KILLED.

Police Seek Tobe Capps as Murderer of W. E. Denton.

(By the Associated Press.)
NEW MADRID, Mo., Oct. 7.—W. E. Denton, 55, former county clerk of New Madrid County, was shot to death at a tavern near here early Sunday, and officers said today they are hunting for Tobe Capps, 65, of Sileston, on charges of killing Denton with a shotgun. Sheriff Sam Harris said he had not learned the exact cause for the killing.

It has been said that every generation of fundamental importance in the modern iron and steel industry is of British origin.

A CALL FOR WORKERS

VOLUNTEERS NEEDED TO FOLD YULE SEALS TO AID DRIVE.

Kansas City Tuberculosis Society Has Added 12,000 New Names to the List—Fifty Thousand Letters to Be Sent Out.

To help save every penny for its school health service, diagnostic and clearing center at General hospital, and its program of public health education, the Kansas City Tuberculosis Society has issued a call for volunteer workers to aid in the activities connected with the mail sale of 9 million new Christmas seals, Herbert S. Jones, president, announced today.

"With the arrival of our new supplies we are anxious to have workers who can start immediately folding the sheets of seals for mailing," Mr. Jones said.

Under the direction of Mrs. Ara Gooding the mailing list is being revised and approximately 12,000 new names are being added. Fifty thousand letters will be sent out this year.

DONORS' NAMES ARE RECORDED.

Mrs. Gooding has a record of every person who has contributed consistently to the Christmas seal fund for the last sixteen years.

"It is a surprise to most individuals to find that we have a complete record of their contributions to the society," Mrs. Gooding said.

Just as soon as the money is returned to the society during the campaign the amount of the gift is recorded on a card which is kept in the working file. The staff which is now at work on this year's mailing list includes Theresa Moylan, Ethel Bohling, Alberta Johnson, Nina Meadows, Ruby Thorson and Dorothy Karbach.

AIDS IN TUBERCULOSIS FIGHT.

The Christmas seal is the chief means of support for 2,000 tuberculosis associations throughout the United States. Besides this country more than forty nations now have or have had Christmas seals to support tuberculosis work. Einar Holboell, a Danish postal clerk, launched the seal idea in 1904.

This year's seal pictures a girl in the costume of the late '60s posing a letter. It is artistically done in red, green, blue and white. At her right is the double-barred cross emblem of the tuberculosis crusade.

Anyone desiring to give volunteer service to the Kansas City Tuberculosis Society should call Miss Jorgina Johnson at the society's headquarters, 1020 McGee street.

"Y" CLASSES TOMORROW.

Miss Genevieve Lichtenwalter will speak on "The Hearing of Music."

Dr. Frank E. August, of the University of Kansas City, will conduct a class on "Social Problems" at the Y. W. C. A. Tuesday night at 8 o'clock. The class, open to men and women, is sponsored by the Business Girls' Club of the association.

Dr. August will begin his series of lectures with consideration of the social problems affecting the daily life. Mrs. Frederick Willard, public affairs chairman for the Y. W. C. A. for Missouri, will teach a class in current events Tuesday at 5:15 o'clock. The course, which also is free and open to both men and women, will survey the important happenings of the previous week with a review of the news and interpretation.

The Business Girls' Club meets every Tuesday night. The regular club program includes a variety of classes and interest groups. The club plans to have a guest speaker each week for the club hour from 7 to 8 o'clock. Miss Genevieve Lichtenwalter will be the guest of honor and will talk on "The Hearing of Music" at the meeting tomorrow. Miss Lichtenwalter will illustrate her lecture with selections from the piano compositions of Bach, Haydn, Grieg, MacDowell, Erik Satie, Bartok and Debussy. She will talk at 7 o'clock, following the club dinner. Mrs. E. E. Francis will speak the following week on "The Appreciation of Music."

CLASSES FOR SERVANTS.

How to Serve, Care for Children and the Home Are Subjects.

Household employees will be given a chance to perfect their training at the institute for household employees, which will begin Wednesday at the Y. W. C. A. The course includes studies in child care, a class in serving and an orientation course for household workers. The course in training has been planned by a committee of industrial club members of the association, who are themselves household employees, with the assistance of Miss Olga Newlon, associate director of the Y. W. C. A. employment department.

The object of the course is to increase the skill of girls and women who are now employed in homes. A series of letters were sent by the industrial committee under the auspices of Mrs. William B. Henderson, chairman, and Miss Charlotte Townsend, industrial secretary, to a list of employers who might wish to make the course available to their household workers.

The committee plans a series of short courses, which will be offered through the year. The courses which will open this week are: Wednesday, 4 to 5 o'clock, studies in child care, with Miss Louise Beth Wilson, director of parent education for the Kansas City public schools, as teacher. This course has been worked out with the co-operation of Teachers' college as an extension course and will last for a 10-week period. The course will include observation of nursery school equipment and technique on field trips and the regular class sessions will be held at the Y. W. C. A.

Thursday, from 4:30 to 5:30 o'clock, a class in orientation for household workers will be given by Miss Martha Hanson of the Kansas City National Training School.

Thursday at 7:30 o'clock a course in serving will be given under the direction of Mrs. Henry Harrison.

Employers may send their household employees to attend the courses. There is no fee for those who are members of the Industrial Club of the Y. W. C. A.

The Industrial Club of the Y. W. C. A. meets on Wednesday and Thursday of each week. On both nights the club hour and dinner is from 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock.

Novel vanities and cigarette cases are while gold engraved with marks of different countries, with the capitals and other gay centers indicated by tiny red or green stones, ruby or emerald chips.

THE NEWEST TUNICS SWING IN PLEATS.

The tunic apron line is the line of pleats in this casually formal silk crepe of ginger brown, and so is the flowing line of the complementing sleeves. A bulky gold brooch and cable of Renaissance inspiration completes the neck interest.

Sartorial Points in Fashion's Compass

Points is the word in neckwear this season, as the important silhouette note of the fall.

Enamel for color touches is smart, and also band trimmings in metal braid or nail-heads.

The debs will simply love a "cute" draw-string bag to accompany the new separate evening hoods.

Although "points out" are better than "points down," there is also a development of the idea of the collar which has one or two points down toward the belt.

Among the novelties presented is a headress for evening entirely of pearls, hand-crocheted, or gold, silver, gunmetal or ruby colored pearl beads. To accompany it is a tiny triangle scarf of the pearls to be worn with a simple black velvet gown.

Let Sportsmanship Guide You In Meeting Life's Challenges

To Keep Your Balance and Courage Through Changing Fortunes Is to Escape That Disappointing Life That Demands Monotony in Preference to Growth.

To accept life's challenges, to try the hazard of new fortunes, to act rather than be acted upon by events is to join that rare and happy company of men and women who have escaped from the monotony and drudgery of life, who have widened their own boundaries and created new frontiers.

Women have more power than men in marriage. A timid, lazy, selfish husband is not often able to destroy his wife's life; she rises above him and carves out her own way. But men are more helpless; the attitude of American men is indulgent and admiring toward their women; they are in the habit of obeying. Which makes it all the more of a tragedy that so few women are sports!

Change is growth, and the thing that does not move does not live.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS.

As a class, American wives are poor sports. Studying them and their problems, year after year, one is forced to the depressing conclusion that most of them are but half-developed as human beings, and that in any change or crisis they are notably poor sports. There are exceptions, of course. The exceptions are the fine mothers and wives who live out their lives in big cities or country towns or lonely farms, solve their difficulties with courage and imagination, and never trouble anyone for advice or sympathy.

But there are millions of the others, too, women who try to make life fit their own petty ideas of comfort and vanity and pleasure. Times change, unexpected circumstances arise, trouble comes, and they collapse. Some women become helpless burdens upon the nearest shoulder; one gets nothing but complaint and protest from them for all the rest of their days.

First the Spoiled Darling. There is Lucia. Lucia married young, married a rich man ten years older than herself. They built a handsome colonial home and lived in some elegance; Lucia, furred and spoiled and lovely, was the happiest young wife imaginable. Presently the firm that employed George underwent some serious setbacks, and George was asked to take a lesser salary and invest in the business what capital he had left. Lucia was indignant at the idea, and easily persuaded him that he was being badly treated. George resigned and began to look about for better prospects.

The best of these was a partnership with an old friend who wanted George with him in the medical supply business. Harry had brains and energy and experience; he wanted George to lend dignity and social value to the venture. It meant moving from Philadelphia to a small manufacturing town, it meant living on a minimum income until the business was well established; it meant, in short, doing exactly what every successful person in the world has to do at the start.

Lucia refused point-blank to consider it. She said that she hadn't been ten years married, hadn't gotten herself into the nicest set, hadn't taken her part in club and social events and learned to play bridge and golf to be banished now to a place like Millville! George grinned affectionately at her tantrum and conceded that it would be pretty hard on adjustments whatever. They want to live in a certain street, and to have and do certain things; under these circumstances they will be reasonably affectionate and amiable, and contribute something, if not much, to the comfort of those about them. But threaten to disturb them, and they show themselves for the soft little cats they are, wanting idleness and petting and a warm corner, and not caring particularly who supplies them, and whining and crying when they are taken away.

Change Is Life's Adventure.

Such women never see that changes, even painful and humiliating changes, are often the gateway to great adventures and successes. They may have heard some such theory in school days, they may have written, "Sweet are the uses of adversity," in their copy books, and learned, "Then welcome each rebuff that turns each earth's smoothness rough," in English class, but nothing of it really penetrated to their minds, nothing changed the selfish tight little boundaries of their souls.

On the other hand there are women left, and perhaps plenty of them, who see life for what it is, a brief period in which change is growth, and the thing that does not move does not live. They see financial reverses as experiences—acute, even unwelcome, but never-the-less to be endured, improved, to be turned into profit. This is the inevitable history of success, the inevitable story of happiness. To accept life's challenges, to try the hazard of new fortunes, to act rather than be acted upon by events is to join that rare and happy company of men and women who have escaped from the monotony and drudgery of life, who have widened their own boundaries and created new frontiers. Women have more power than men in marriage. A timid, lazy, selfish husband is not often able to destroy his wife's life; she rises above him and carves out her own way. KIDNAPING TRIAL IS ON

THE ROBINSONS CHARGED WITH ABDUCTION OF MRS. STOLL.

Selection Is Under Way—Defense Predicts Case Will End Quickly, While Prosecution Is of Other Opinion.

(By the Associated Press.)

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 7.—From 100 federal court today began selection of twelve jurors and an alteration of two persons indicted for the $30,000 kidnaping of Mrs. Alice Stoll, Louisville society matron, who was slugged and snatched from her home on Lime Kiln lane a year ago and held for six days in an Indianapolis apartment.

The defendants, Thomas H. Robinson, st. of Nashville, and his daughter, Mrs. Frances Robinson, expressed confidence that they would be "vindicated" by the jury.

This confidence was likewise expressed by their attorneys, Clem W. Huggins of Louisville and Monte S. Huggins of Nashville. Huggins said he thought it likely the trial would be concluded an hour after the jury was sworn in.

United States District Attorney Frank Gardner, on the other hand, pointed to the seventy-six witnesses summoned, or whose depositions have been taken, and predicted the trial would continue for several days.

STOLL SEES HEAVY SENTENCES. Gardner made no forecast of the outcome, but Berry V. Stoll, husband of the kidnap victim, said he believed the defendants would be convicted and given sentences "close to the imprisonment."

The 23-year-old Mrs. Robinson is the wife of Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., who was the actual abductor, who was covered his trail effectively since a few days after Mrs. Stoll was released from her Indianapolis hideout October 16 of last year.

The two defendants assisted the Stolls and the family of William S. Stoll, Mrs. Stoll's father, in ransom negotiations. Their actions in this connection form the basis of the prosecution's case. They insist their intention was to help the relatives and federal agents and that they wanted the ransom money at the request of both.

HER MAID WILL TESTIFY.

Testimony of Mrs. Stoll, who has maintained strict silence regarding the kidnaping, and of Ann Woelke, her former maid, the only other eyewitness to the abduction, was expected to cause a sensation.

Federal agents said Robinson, Jr., drove north into Indiana and took his victim to a ground floor apartment in Indianapolis.

A federal agent, posing as an express company operative, delivered the ransom money to the elder Robinson. Through letters and a telephone message Berry Stoll was directed to name Mrs. Robinson, Jr., as the person to whom the money be delivered to effect Mrs. Stoll's release.

This was done. Mrs. Robinson got the money and took it to Indianapolis. Federal agents trailed her, but failed to follow her to the apartment where Mrs. Stoll was held.

Later Mrs. Robinson brought Mrs. Stoll to the home of Mrs. Stoll's relatives, the Rev. and Mrs. F. Arnold, in Indianapolis. They decided to bring Mrs. Stoll back to Louisville and Mrs. Robinson drove the car, saying she was afraid of her husband and did not want to stay with him.

HUNT FOR BIG PLANE ON. Standard Oil Liner May Be Lost in Lake.

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 7.—The briny waters of Great Salt Lake were scanned by aerial searchers today for signs of a palatial transport plane, missing with its crew of three since early Sunday morning.

Private and commercial planes and several boats were assembled today in a systematic search for the big ship, owned by the Standard Oil Company of California.

Fear was expressed by pilots that the airliner—supplied with several thousand dollars of special apparatus in addition to standard equipment—had plunged into the lake.

Those aboard were: R. S. Allen, 35, pilot, Oakland, Cal.; G. A. Lenz, 35, copilot, Alameda, Cal.; George C. Anderson, 25, mechanic, Alameda, Cal.

SALT LAKE CITY, Oct. 7.—H. A. Collison, pilot of a United Air Lines plane, which crashed near Cheyenne early today, had a flying record that extended back to the World War.

A Mass of Debris. Pilot Robert Ferguson of the U. A. searching fleet, operating from Cheyenne, was first to find the plane. "A dark mass of debris was about all I could see," said Ferguson. "I merely circled the scene and returned."

P. J. Anderson of Wyoming Air force, assisting the searchers, was second flier over the scene.

"I found several bodies were lying on the plane," said Anderson. "I came down fairly low because the other altitudes the wreckage might have been passed for a grazing of cattle."

Debris had a trail along a ravine the foot of the knoll. The ship was tipped apart. There were some indications, from the position of the wreckage, that the plane had attempted to climb, but had been forced back by striking the hilltop. If a giant hand had pushed it to the ground."

A STEP TO ENTER RISK CASE.

Supreme Court Grants Permission to File Brief Asking to Intervene.

(By the Associated Press.)

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 7.—R. M. Sheppard, Kansas City lawyer representing a group of policyholders in the 16 1/2 per cent fire insurance litigation, is taking his fight to the state supreme court in intervening in behalf of his clients.

Pending the filing of an application for leave to intervene, the court today granted Sheppard and five associates leave to file a brief pointing out reasons for entering the case.

The case, which began in 1930 when the insurance companies put into effect a 16 1/2 per cent increase in rates without the sanction of the state insurance department, recently was taken to the supreme court on an appeal from a judgment of Judge Nike G. Sevier of the Cole County circuit court.

Judge Sevier held the $1,786,000 in impounded excess premium collections belonged to the policyholders and should be redistributed to them.

THE LABOR MEET BEGINS

GREEN DENOUNCES FOREIGN CAPITAL BEHIND NEW PARTY PLAN.

Delegates Cheer as President Takes Stand of Neutrality in Conflict—Carry on Fight for 30-Hour Week.

(By the Associated Press.)

ATLANTIC CITY, Oct. 7.—President William Green opened the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor today with a speech in which he denounced a proposed labor party as the desire of a "foreign capital."

"No organization meeting on foreign soil can tell the American Federation of Labor what it should or should not do," he declared.

AMERICA SHOULD STAY OUT.

The labor head drew thunderous applause from the delegates with an antiwar declaration:

"I know I give expression to the hearts and minds of the nation's working men and women when I say that labor will say to our government: 'Under no circumstances must we be drawn into this (Italian-Ethiopian) conflict.'"

On the proposed Labor party, he said:

"The American Federation of Labor in my judgment, will back such a party when the crystallized opinion of the workers is that their purposes can be better served by an independent party."

WON'T TAKE FOREIGN ORDERS.

"The American Federation of Labor will not be coerced into that—it will not take that action because some order comes from a foreign capital directing the workers of this country to form an independent political party."

Green said organized labor would carry the fight for a 6-hour day and 5-day week to every city, town and hamlet, as its solution for industrial recovery.

A SEMITAILED FALL

VELVETEEEN ALSO IS POPULAR IN HOLLYWOOD'S WARDROBE.

Blonde Anita Louise Is Striking in Blue—Colbert in an Ensemble of Brown and Green.

By MOLLIE MERRICK.

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 7.—High fur collars, rough wools and tweeds and coats of rabbit's hair wool stand out in the vanguard of autumn chic. The smart woman will look semitailed this fall, with coats and suits that may be fastened high about the throat or left open in a flattering "V" below the neckline.

Rosalind Keith, attractive newcomer to the screen, selects for her first fall coat a brown ribbed wool, with a massive collar of blue fox. The fur may be fastened up to her chin or left low, as she wishes. In a coat of this sort, where all the interest is around the shoulders, the body part falls simply and conservatively to an almost ankle length.

Miss Keith's jaunty little hat is of brown suede, the same as her purse and gloves. Oxford in a deeper tone of brown completes the costume.

Velveteen plays a big part in fall smartness. You may have a suit, frock or ensemble of velveteen, or you may combine it with jersey or matelasse to get a different effect. It all depends.

HIGH FUR COLLARS AND ROUGH WOOLS MARK THE CHIC AUTUMN COATS, AS ROSALIND KEITH, NEWCOMER TO HOLLYWOOD'S RANKS, WELL ILLUSTRATES.

Claudette Colbert lunched in a green and brown dress the other day, and all eyes were turned in her direction. The marsh green blouse of velveteen topped a wool skirt done in brown and plaid. Brown wooden buttons fastened the neck and sleeves, and a brown leather belt of intricate design cinched her slender waist.

With this dress La Colbert wore a brown velvet belt pulled low over one eye and a brown woolen swag coat that was held at a low waistline with a leather belt.

Such an ensemble is gay, youthful and smart these days.

Anita Louise, who will merit all kinds of praise when "A Midsummer Night's Dream" is released, starts all who see her by her perfection of beauty and grooming.

Navy blue must be her favorite color, as she appears most often in it. Even her pajamas are mostly in navy or marine blue, often relieved by a vivid green scarf.

For one of her delicate blonde beauty no smarter color scheme could be chosen.

Grecian lines, Renaissance splendor and a general display of gay colors will mark the newest frocks of the fall season. Street dresses show color in bright reds and blues; a stunning combination in brunette types such as Carmen Constance, who wears a suit and hat in these colors very well.

And if you're the Joan Crawford type, wear a halo hat well back on your head and curl a few locks up over the brim in front. Joan does this in black velvet and combines it with a silver lame and black velvet cocktail frock that is the last word in smartness.

Other highlights in fall fashions include street clothes in practically all shades of green—you may choose the one most becoming to you—with brown as second best in the modern scheme of things.

For evenings there's geranium red and Madonna blue to coax you into a new frock. Joan Bennett combines these colors in a floating evening frock of blue moire with red sash and shoes. A single red blossom in Joan's blonde hair makes this costume about perfect.

Crawling Back to Prosperity. To The Star: What are "safe speeds?"

The writer was fined $5 for exceeding the speed limit of twelve and one-half miles an hour in 1914.

Let the Safety Council propose cutting the speed to fifteen miles an hour on all streets in Kansas City. Fifteen miles an hour will bring security to all. This rate of speed would allow the big operators to put horses on the streets. This would give John Farmer a break and he soon would be coming to town to buy goods.

Some Elderly Bishops.

WARRENSBURG, Mo., To The Star: The Associated Press not only was in error but is grossly wise of the mark when it said Bishop Gailor, 79 years old (whose death was announced in The Star, October 3), was the "oldest bishop of the Protestant Episcopal church in this country."

Not counting two missionary bishops whose service has been in the foreign field, what about Lemuel Henry Wells, retired bishop of Spokane, who tops the list of living bishops at 94 years old?

And these others, also on the retired list: Bishop Brewster of Connecticut, 86; Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts, 84; Bishop Winchester of Arkansas, 83; Bishop Burton of Kentucky, 82; and Bishop Reese of Georgia, Bishop Woodcock of Kentucky, and Bishop Saphore (not retired), age 80. Date and place of birth will be furnished gladly.

Fears a National Machine. To The Star: The Republican party has two important duties in 1936, to re-establish confidence of the common people in the ability of our form of government to survive great emergencies, and to prevent the huge partisan machine erected by the present administration from controlling the election. The one objective may be attained by organization, while the other requires mental alertness in campaigning.

Administrative failures and partisan delinquencies over the years have tended to disintegrate any spirit of loyalty many citizens ever had, until today it is a chore to get millions to the polls to vote for or against important men or measures. Political affairs in most cities are left to machines, which control the machinery of elections and corrupt offices with their henchmen. There is great danger such a situation may become national, as well as sectional, in 1936.

The party that wins in 1936 will be the seeker after truth, rather than the one already possessed of the truth—in the estimation of its leaders. The people demand truth, honesty, fairness and justice, and the party convincing the people that it will deliver these things will be given the decision. The public hardly knows one party from the other and has nothing except traditional love for either one. It turns from one to the other because of lack of confidence in the one, and hope of ability of the other to carry out the will of the people better.

Extravagant campaign promises of candidates are certain to be discounted in 1936 and even party platforms will be put aside. If the Republicans promise to put all principles of the new deal to the test of life and work, retaining all that is good and discarding what is bad, they may be able to restore confidence not alone in the ability of our form of government to function serviceably under all conditions obtaining among the people, but also in the ability of the Republican party to run the government as it should be run.

MAY BE THE LUSITANIA

ORPHIR SPOTS A 600-FOOT HULK OFF KINSALE.

Diver Will Go Down to Identify the Wreck—After a Search of Three Months, Luck Turns.

By GILBERT MCALLISTER.

ABOARD THE SALVAGE SHIP ORPHIR, Oct. 7.—Coincidence with the news flash to the world that President Roosevelt had warned Americans off Italian ships in order to prevent another Lusitania incident, the Orphir today charted a 600-foot wreck believed to be the Lusitania.

The wreck lies in fifty-two fathoms of water eleven miles from Old Head of Kinsale, on a line bearing south. This position tallies closely with that given by Captain Turner of the Lusitania at the inquest into the sinking twenty years ago.

Diver Jim Jarratt is expected to complete the identification of the wreck tomorrow by a descent in his iron man diving suit. There is no reason to suppose that a wreck of this size in this position could be anything but the Lusitania.

A STROKE OF LUCK. The discovery was made by the Orphir's echo-sounder yesterday afternoon during a search undertaken only as a last forlorn hope.

Heavy seas and wintry winds Saturday night had convinced Captain Henry Russell that the Orphir's dogged 3-month quest would have to be abandoned. The salvage ship had been practically weather-bound for weeks, with every indication that winter's furious storms had come permanently to the Irish Coast. Little of the area around Kinsale remained uncharted by the echo-sounder.

On its first cruise across this section of ocean Chief Officer Horn, on the bridge, took the Orphir 500 yards outside the area's limits, "just for luck."

It was then that able Seaman Mitchell, at the helm, glanced at the echo-sounder graph and shouted: "There's something sir!"

GRAPH POINTS TO WRECK. The graph showed a big projection. Without doubt it was part of a large wreck, the largest yet discovered through the Orphir's three months of persistent searching.

Captain Russell rushed to the bridge and ordered the Orphir instantly to return in its wake. Nine minutes later the flashing pencil of the echo-sounder again charted the enormous hulk.

At a speed of two knots, the Orphir steamed again and again over the position, and by crossing and re-crossing positively proved the existence of an immense sunken vessel more than 600 feet long, directly below.

Although, with characteristic Scottish caution, he will refuse to claim definitely that the Lusitania has been discovered until Diver Jarratt brings conclusive proof from the ocean it

A NEW YORK-LONDON AIR BOAT.

Plans for the 50-Ton Craft Are Ready.

(By the Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—The National Aeronautical Association announced today that plans had been drawn up for a 50-ton flying boat to carry payloads of passengers, mail and express between New York and London on regular overnight schedule, "every hour on the hour."

The proposed flying boat, which engineers were said to hold "entirely feasible," will be a reality soon, the association declared. The ship, the association contended, will be twice as large as the 51,000-pound clipper ship being built for use on the projected Trans-Pacific route.

According to the technical report, first class passengers might pay as low as $415 for a 1-way trip from New York to London at the start of the transoceanic service of two round trips a week, with the rate dropping to $265 when nine or more trips were made each week.

FIRE WEEK IS UNDER WAY

SCHOOLS RECEIVE FIRST ATTENTION OF THE FIREMEN.

Kansas City, Kansas, Buildings

Warned of Hazards—C. of C.
Division Meeting Tonight.

Six teams of firemen today began a tour of inspection of school buildings in Kansas City, Kansas, as a part of the observance of annual Fire Prevention week in Kansas City, Kansas.

At each school building the firemen will conduct fire drills, recording the time required to clear the buildings of pupils and teachers, and lecture to

Other teams of firemen inspecting school buildings and conducting fire drills included Capt. Harry Leonard, Capt. James Wall, Capt. Clarence Johnson, Capt. James York, Lester Pedago, Frank Werner, Capt. Granville Morgan, Powhattan Perkins, Louis Bowlin, Charles Ladell, William George (night chief), Capt. Aaron Smith, William Nohrn, Michael Gorman, Thomas Noone and Thomas Withers.

Fire drills were not conducted at some of the schools visited today because of weather conditions. Those buildings will be visited later for conducting drills.

REPORTS TO THE CHIEF.

Conditions found at each school building will be reported to Chief Olander Lind and after a study of the reports he will make recommendations to the board of education.

At a meeting at the Kansas City, Kansas, Chamber of Commerce to-night, Mr. Taylor will talk to an assembly of the employees' division of the chamber. At a noon luncheon there tomorrow he will address a joint meeting of various civic clubs.

Chief Lind pointed out today that Kansas City, Kansas, has for the last several years enjoyed a fire insurance rate much lower than that es-established for other cities of similar population. Teachings of Fire Prevention week, he believes, have been at least partly responsible for that condition.

BIG SHOW WEDNESDAY NIGHT.

Most interest in Fire Prevention week is centered on an exhibition of fire fighting and life saving methods to be given Wednesday night on the ramp and drill tower in front of fire headquarters at Sixth street and

Armstrong avenue, Kansas City, Kansas. Joseph B. Fee, first assistant fire chief, will be in charge of that program. He has arranged to block off enough space in that area to ac-

One change has been made this year in instructions to school children concerning the procedure in turning in fire alarms. Heretofore they have and has asked that they be told only to inform the operator that they desire to report a fire. When that is done the operator immediately will connect the party with the fire department.

CUBS' HOPES SLIM

Injury to Warneke Lessens Chances of the National League Club in Series.

HIS RIGHT ARM ACHES

Strained Muscle Comes When He Snaps a Curve to Rowe in the Third Inning.

FRENCH ON HILL TODAY

(By the Associated Press.)

DETROIT, Oct. 7.—A pair of arms, a left that was rested but uncertain and a great right that ached with pain, held the hopes of the Chicago Cubs today as they courageously fought against "sudden death" in world series warfare.

The strong left arm was that of Larry French, the club's "iron man," who was given the big assignment of beating the Detroit Tigers and squaring the series at three all today. The other, the arm that has won the team's only two victories, was the bumpy right arm of Lonnie Warneke, who appeared all but definitely through in the fight for gold and baseball glory.

Warneke's chance of pitching the seventh game of the series, should the durable French deliver today, was next to hopeless. His right arm ached from the pain of a pulled muscle near the shoulder and, although Trainer Andy Lotshaw worked over him feverishly, he appeared definitely through with the big show.

An Exhibition of Games.

The pitching pride of the Cubs exhibited his gameness yesterday when he pitched three full innings in stoical silence despite his injury, it was revealed as the Cub special sped on to Detroit. He strained an arm muscle in the third inning as he pitched a snap curve to his Tiger mound rival, Schoolboy Rowe, but didn't utter a word of complaint to his mates. Not until he pitched a weak one to Charlie Gehringer in the sixth did anyone else know. It was then Catcher Gabby Hartnett realized that Lon's arm had gone limp and signaled the bench for relief.

"He didn't say a thing to me," Hartnett revealed, "but when I saw that pitch to Gehringer, I knew something was wrong. I asked him about it and he admitted his arm was aching. His act of pitching three full innings with an arm that ached like a toothache was one of the game's most acts I ever heard of in baseball."

Manager Charlie Grimm expressed great concern over the sore arm of his ace. Should French win today, he is anxious to have Warneke take the mound in the seventh and deciding game to clinch the world's championship. Such a triumph for the long, lean Mount Ida, Ark., farmer boy not only would be worth $2191.36 in money to him and his Cub mates as the difference between the winner's and loser's share per man, but would give Warneke the distinction of being the first pitcher to win three world series games since Stanley Coveleskie did it for Cleveland in 1920. If Warneke can't pitch, Bill Lee probably will get the final call.

Would Like to Pitch Tomorrow. "My arm hurts me just like a toothache," Warneke said as he played cards with three of his mates on the train, "but it may come around again. I'd like to pitch the game Monday and could, too, but it hurts too much. Maybe I'll be okay for Tuesday."

Chuck Klein, who substituted for Fred Lindstrom yesterday and won the game with a towering homer, was certain to carry on today, although Lindy's injured left hand was greatly improved.

"They'd be a sucker to put me back," Lindy said. "Klein is a natural for the series. He is deathly against pitchers like the Tigers, who throw overhand from the right side. Bridges will have a tough time with him today, as he throws just like George Earnshaw. George never saw the time he could get Klein out."

BIG GAMES FOR THE VALLEY.

Six Strong Nonconference Foes Are on Saturday's List.

(By the Associated Press.)

DES MOINES, Ia., Oct. 7.—Six Missouri Valley conference football teams will play powerful nonconference foes this week-end, the hardest assignments ever given Valley elevens.

Drake, easy winner in two warm-up games, must face the power and deception of Ohio State's Buckeyes Saturday at Columbus. The champion Washington Bears, 28 to 6 loser at Illinois Saturday, face another major foe Saturday when they entertain Southern Methodist, one of the best teams in the Southwest.

Texas Christian, another rugged southwestern team, comes to Tulsa to meet Tulsa university. Creighton, tied with Grinnell for the Valley lead as a result of a 16 to 0 victory over the Oklahoma Aggies, travels to Houston for a battle with Rice.

Grinnell takes things comparatively easy by playing Carleton college at Northfield, Minn., in the other Saturday game.

Saturday's Football Stars.

Tommy McGannon, Purdue—Ran fifty-two yards for a touchdown as Purdue beat Northwestern, 7 to 0.

Vince Reno, Temple—Ran ninety-five yards with a second half kickoff, to score as Temple beat Texas A. and M., 14 to 0.

Bred Kelen, Indiana—Despite an injured leg, he booted two conversions as Indiana beat Centre, 14 to 0.

Five and Mable, Missouri—Completed the pass which gave their team a 7 to 0 victory over Warrensburg Teachers.

Wilbur Henry, Illinois—Passed Illinois to a 28 to 6 victory over Washington University.

Chick Chesire, University of California at Los Angeles—Scored twice, once on a 77-yard run, as his team downed Oregon State, 20 to 7.

When A. J. Egan Pitched for George Tebeau . . . Now Detroit's Chief of Scouts . . . Once Coached Baseball at Baker and "Big Liz" Liston Was His Pitcher . . . When Frank Hulseman Hit Tebeau for a Finer . . . Recalls Joe Crisp as a Fine Young Catcher Until a Knee Injury Came . . . Hughey Hill and "Nig" Perrine.

(By The Star's Sports Editor.)

DETROIT, Oct. 7.—Aloysius Jerome Egan—chances are the name doesn't mean anything to you. They—baseball fans of nearly thirty years ago—called him "Rip" and "Wish." The late George Tebeau, who owned the old B-Jose, as they frequently were dubbed, called him "Wish." In baseball he is still called "Wish."

"Wish" Egan pitched for Kansas City in Jimmy Burke's managerial reign. That must have been 1907. The next spring Monte Cross, who replaced Burke, let Egan go. "Wish," a free agent, went out to California and joined the Stockton club of a then famous outlaw league. There he discovered Danny Shay as a manager.

Shay later came to the Blues on Egan's recommendation to Tebeau.

ALOYSIUS J. EGAN is now the director of Detroit's scouting force, of which our mystery man of St. Mary's, Stephen O'Rourke, is a member. The others are Billy Doyle, Eddie Goostree and Jack Zellers. Since 1911, "Wish" has been with the Detroit club. He must be a lot of shucks in a lot of ways with Owner Frank J. Navin. His office at the ball park is next to the club owner's.

"Wish" Egan has many fond memories of his days in Kansas City, and at times in the evening hours, with a glass in hand or nearby, he likes to con over old days.

One story he tells to any who will listen has to do with the time, either in the spring of 1909 or '10, when he spent six weeks coaching baseball at Baker University, Baldwin.

"This fellow here," says "Wish" Egan, nudging a glass toward me, "sent me to Baker, me a good Catholic in a Methodist institution, and Egan chuckles as he tells the story. "I happened into The Star office just when a call came from Baker making inquiries about a coach. I took the job and we had a dandy team."

You wouldn't guess the name of the pitcher in "Wish" Egan's Baker team that spring. He was Emil Sycamore Liston, who these many years has been athletic director and football and baseball coach of his alma mater.

"Big Liz" Liston—Egan smiles when he thinks of him. "He was my pitcher," says Egan, "and a good one."

EGAN recalls the day when Frank Hulseman, a giant outfielder, hit three home runs in a spring exhibition game in Kansas City. The players didn't have a dime. Each was dead broke. Hulseman was feeling mighty good after those three home runs. He said he hit Tebeau for fifty and would let all the fellows have a few dollars to run them till the first payday.

Egan accompanied Hulseman into the baseball offices. But he let Hulseman go in first. "Wish" had pitched for Tebeau two years in Louisville. He knew the club owner was a hard hombre.

Suddenly Hulseman came out the door, shut it and then knocked timidly.

"Come in," said Tebeau.

Soon Hulseman was out again. He didn't come out with a dime. The fifty he had intended to ask for had dwindled to a request for five. He didn't get the five.

EGAN wanted to know what happened.

"Well, when I opened that door and went in," said big Hulseman, "There was Tebeau in that swivel chair pecking away on his typewriter. "Whaddya doin' in here?" growled Tebeau when he looked up; 'get outa here and knock when you want to come in.'"

That was when the big fellow came out, shut the door and rapped timidly.

Hulseman went on with his story to Egan. "Well, don't think just because you hit those three homers today you get any advance money," the owner growled. "They don't count. Get 'em in the playin' season. They don't get you anything now."

"Hulseman was so scared he didn't even remember whether he had asked for the five," says Egan in recalling the incident.

WHEN Hulseman finished his story "Wish" Egan went in.

"Well, whaddya want?" said Tebeau. "Say, you didn't send that busser in here, did you?"

"No, sir, he just came in of his own accord," said Egan. "I want money to send Mrs. Egan transportation to come here."

"All right, you can have the transportation. It won't cost you anything, but don't be sending those busses in here."

"He was a rough man," says "Wish" Egan, "but he knew baseball. He was a hard master, but when he came to like you and you knew him he wasn't so bad. He didn't want any sissies around."

EGAN remembers Joe Crisp as one of the most promising catchers he ever saw.

"Joe was just a boy with the Blues," says Egan. "I asked Tebeau to let him catch me one day. Joe caught, and he won the game in Minneapolis with a 2-base hit."

"Was that Joe Crisp a scrapper?" ruminates "Wish" Egan. "We were walking down the street the night of the Jeffries-Johnson fight. Johnson had just knocked out Jeff, and Joe was pretty low. We passed a couple of colored bucks and they were hilarious. They wanted to know who won the fight. They knew, of course. 'Well, I can tell you who's gonna win this one,' said Joe, as he let one of the Negroes have it. Then he let the other one have it, and we weren't bothered by those boys any more."

"Yes," continued "Wish" Egan, "that Joe Crisp was the greatest rough and tumble fighter I ever saw, and he would have been a great major league catcher if he hadn't hurt his knee."

MANY incidents of his playing days in Kansas City hold places in the memory of Aloysius Jerome Egan.

"Do you remember the day Hughey Hill threw his bat at a taunting fan in the grandstand?" he asks.

"And the day 'Nig' Perrine got tired of being razed by a man in a box seat and went over and punched him?"

Egan tells the story of "Nig" Perrine inheriting some money one spring. Perrine got a check while the players were training. He let all the fellows have $10 or $15, whatever they wanted. He was a great little fellow, that "Nig" Perrine.

"How about that day you came in as a relief pitcher with the bases filled and 'Doc' Gessler at bat and he drove the ball far and high over the left center fence to win the game in the ninth?" I asked Egan.

"Didn't he hit that one?" Egan smiled. "After the game Tebeau asked me what I threw Gessler. I knew that whatever I said would be wrong, so I asked Tebeau what he would have thrown him. 'A curve ball,' said Tebeau. 'Well, that's what I threw him,' I said. Tebeau couldn't say anything to that . . . but it was a fast ball I threw him."

NO FEAR FOR MINNESOTA

NEBRASKA IS CONFIDENT OF VICTORY IN COMING BATTLE.

A Cornhusker Scout, However, Brings Word That the Gophers Are Tough Again—Eyes on Mythical Title.

(By a Member of The Star's Staff.)

AMES, Ia., Oct. 7.—When Nebraska and Minnesota meet in the Husker stadium Saturday, the husky youths from out Lincoln way won't be conceding the mighty Gophers a thing. This was the word passed along by Dana Bible, head mentor of the Nebraska team, as he sat in the team's dressing room in Ames Saturday after watching his proteges grind Iowa State into the ground for their second decisive victory of the season.

After listening week after week last fall to the feats of the 1934 Gopher powerhouse, and being told by sports authorities and opposition coaches that this year's team should be every bit as good, it is a little difficult to imagine any group of eleven college boys in the country being good enough to make Bierman's scholars say "uncle."

TWO VICTORIES.

However, after watching Chicago and Iowa State, two ball clubs who decidedly aren't "pushovers," fall before the Nebraska onslaught by a decisive margin, one might be excused for faintly wondering if the aforementioned eleven boys might not be located at the Lincoln institution. This is what Bible's head scout, W. H. Browne, had to say about the Gophers after watching them sink a good North Dakota State team in their opener by a 3-touchdown margin.

"Minnesota potentially is just as good as they were last year. They have much better passing this year, with Roscoe doing the throwing and apparently have just as many good replacements as they had last year. Their first string is almost as good this year, although they aren't, as yet, as smooth a functioning unit as their predecessors."

There are several factors that undoubtedly show the Cornhuskers to an advantage. While Minnesota has played only one game, the Nebraska team already has two tough ones under its belt. Minnesota lost a number of good men from their No. 1 team, while the Huskers had a majority of sophomores last year, who have had the benefit of one year's experience.

THREE STRONG BACKS.

In Cardwell, LaNoue and Francis, in the backfield, and Scherer, McDonald and Dohrmann at the ends, Nebraska has performers who may overshadow the best that Minnesota can offer. Add to these the fact that the game is being played in Lincoln, where the home boys are notoriously tough to beat, and you have some of the reasons for Nebraska optimism. The game seems to be a toss-up, although Minnesota probably will rank as game time favorites, largely on their last fall record, together with the number of their returning veterans.

That Nebraska has some designs on the mythical national championship would seem to be indicated in the fact that Coach Bible primarily was interested in the results of the Princeton-Pennsylvania and the St. Mary's-California games when he returned to the dressing room last Saturday.

As neither of the four teams appear on the Husker schedule, plus the fact that the Nebraska 1935 schedule lists Chicago, Minnesota, Pittsburgh and Oregon State in addition to the sister schools of the Big Six conference, it is more than likely that Nebraska supporters have their eye on the Rose Bowl.

FORT HAYS CELEBRATES.

The Victory Over Kansas State Calls for a Holiday.

(By the Associated Press.)

HAYS, Kas., Oct. 7.—No classes met today at Fort Hays State as the 840 students of this little Western Kansas school celebrated the momentous 3 to 0 victory over Kansas State at Manhattan.

Today's holiday drew not even a mild official protest as President C. E. Rarick and the faculty joined in helping to plan the day of fun. The day's program included a pep rally in Sheridan coliseum, a varsity dance this morning and another tonight.

ILLINI ON WAY TO COAST.

Team Will Practice in Tucson for Southern Cal. Game.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Oct. 7.—A squad of thirty-five Illinois players left today for Los Angeles, where Illinois will meet Southern California Saturday in the season's first big intersectional game.

The Illini will arrive in Tucson, Ariz., Wednesday morning and will practice there until Friday, when they will go to Los Angeles.

MIKE LAYDEN IS INJURED.

NOTRE DAME, Ind., Oct. 7.—Mike Layden, Notre Dame right halfback and the team's leading ground gainer on running plays, will be lost to the team for two weeks as a result of a leg injury received in the game with Carnegie Tech at Pittsburgh, physicians announced here today.

A WORLD SERIES COCKTAIL.

(By The Star's Sports Editor.)

DETROIT, Oct. 7.—Boos for the umpires when they appeared, a ringing vocal raspberry concert when the announcer named Moriarty as the plate umpire . . . Cochrane crashed through Warneke for two of the three hits off the Cub hurler, but Lon got "Black Mike's" number his last two times up . . . There has been no fanning of perspiring pitchers with Turkish towels in the hands of trainers between innings in this series . . . When Goslin went to bat, Herman played several feet back on the right field sod. On his first plate appearance, the Goose hit the first pitch directly to the second baseman in his far back stance . . . The first inning brought a Cub hope when Klein and Hartnett singled with two out, Klein reaching third . . . Then came a spectacular play, with Owens beating down Demaree's hot bounder and tossing to Rowe for the putout in a close play. Ernie Guigley, the St. Marys savant, got mixed up in the play, lost his cap, but went right on through with his gesture in calling the runner out . . . Warneke and Rowe matched singles in the game . . . Both Warneke and Rowe were stingy with their pitches at times. Five pitches routed Clifton, Rowe and White in the third and six pitches disposed of Hack, Jorges and Warneke in the fourth . . . The sliding play of Jorges at the home register in the sixth was close enough to cause plenty of argument. Naturally the Cub fans saw it only the Chicago way, but the question seemed to be as to just where Cochrane was standing when he took the throw . . . Cavarretta, who has been having his troubles with Detroit pitching, tried a bunt in the second, but Owens took the ball and tagged him . . . Owens' stop of Demaree's eighth inning screamer was good fielding and Rowe was over fast to take the putout . . . No photographers are permitted on the field after the game starts. In Chicago the camera men were stationed along a hanging balcony in the grandstand. C. E. McBride.

Charley Gehringer Is the Class Of the World Series Players

Freddie Lindstrom and "Babe" Ruth Among Those Voting This Honor to the Tiger Second Sacker.

BY JOHN LARDNER.

Copyright, 1935, by the North American Newspaper Alliance (The Kansas City Star and other newspapers).

CHICAGO, Oct. 7.—As the boys go back, back, back to Michigan for the sixth game of the world series, there is little doubt in their minds that Charley Gehringer, the silent and graceful German who performs at second base for the Tigers, is the best ball player on the two clubs.

He is pressed for the place by Lon Warneke and by Mickey Cochrane, and by Bill Herman, but he wins. There is no one like him for steady, sharp, timely hitting, and no one remotely like him for fielding that ball. He has no batting weakness. He can throw and run and think on his feet.

Up till this series, there were skeptics who held that Charles was a bit short on intestinal fortitude—better known by a more graphic word. Well, that impression has been pretty well dispelled. Ask Freddie Lindstrom.

Proves His Gameness.

"That guy is as game as they come," says Fred. "I went into him with everything I had at second base in the first game, and he took it and slapped me down. He wouldn't move an inch for me. Don't let 'em kid you that he's yellow."

With that point cleared up, there is nothing you can say against Gehringer. He has another fanatical admirer in Babe Ruth, who doesn't always remember Charles' first name but knows and respects him on sight. "He's the best ball player around," said the Babe the other day, just after Charlie had disturbed Mr. Carleton by stealing second as clean as a new-mown whistle. "He picks his spots. Did you see him steal that one? There wasn't a soul on the field that was looking for it."

Setting the Batting Pace.

Charles is the leading hitter of the series so far, and the leader in runs batted in. What's more, he missed a huge home run by inches in the second game, when the hit blew a couple, and he has been robbed of a couple of doubles by the classy fielding of Demaree and Klein and Lindstrom. He doesn't do much talking. Gehringer, even among his teammates. He is a shrewd and careful business man. He runs a string of gas stations in Detroit. The chances are that he will never starve, for he plays it safe and stows the sugar away. About the current series he has little to say.

Greenberg Is Sorely Missed.

"We miss Greenberg more than you'd think," he commented in the clubhouse. "He's become a great hitter, and his punch might have won the fifth game today. In fact, it would have. We had men on base three times when his turn came in the batting order—but he wasn't there."

Greenberg's absence is tough on the Tigers, of course, but Gehringer's would be far tougher. If not the spark plug, he is the mainspring of the Tiger machine. He scared the opposing pitchers. They know there is nothing they can throw that will bother him. He wasn't fazed by Dean in the series last year.

Warneke is the only pitcher I've ever seen who has the sign on Charlie, and the chances are that, if Lon works again this week, he will find that Gehringer has solved him. He stores up his knowledge. And it doesn't take him long to learn.

America Will Stay Out.

President Roosevelt's proclamations warning American citizens that any trading with either of the belligerent nations, or any traveling on their ships, must be at their own risk, are rightly described as "history making."

Heretofore the United States has insisted on the "freedom of the seas" for its citizens and its commerce. But it was dramatically demonstrated in the World War, that under modern conditions of warfare the traditional freedom of the seas could not be protected without bringing this country into the conflict.

So it became apparent that if the United States intended to preserve its neutrality in a war which conceivably might spread to Europe, it must be prepared to make the sacrifice involved in the President's proclamations. There is no question that this country is determined to stay out of any future war if it is humanly possible to do so.

In view of this determination the President's action must be recognized as necessary and

EXPORTERS in a New York meeting have urged that sales of American goods to Italy be made only on a cash basis. Evidently, the American exporters do not share Il Duce's faith in his Ethiopian venture.

Strange Trend in Employment.

Difficult as it is to get at the facts about employment in the United States, the situation today seems to offer an interesting contrast to that of two years ago. At this time in 1933 the NRA was just being launched on a vast flood of ballyhoo, the chief hope and promise of it being the opening of more jobs. But the succeeding months did not show any appreciable drop in unemployment, nor were there other employment changes during the whole period of the NRA's operation except such as might reasonably have been attributable to seasonal influences.

But, peculiar as it may appear and coincidence that it may be, at least in part, the trend of employment has been upward since the NRA was invalidated—and this movement has been contrary to the usual seasonal trend.
According to a survey by the National Association of Manufacturers, the finding of which has been supported from other sources (including the government's own reports), there was a gain of 4 per cent in the number of workers employed in industry from the end of May to the end of August, against a customary seasonal decline of 4 per cent in those months.

This may mean simply that "times are getting better," a view that the administration has expressed quite frequently of late. But if so, the employment phase of better times has developed without the aid of the agency that was held essential to it two years back, damaging as that fact may be to the theory of artificial stimulus at the hands of government.

Another Fruit Fly Drive.

Because of the movements of the energetic Prof. Rexford Guy Tugwell who has gone to the City of Mexico in pursuit of the Mexican fruit fly, we foresee a vigorous campaign in prospects, with heavy drains on the 4-billion-dollar relief fund. No doubt it is all necessary, and the Mexican fruit fly must be discouraged at all costs. What is money for, anyway, except to spend—especially taxpayers' money?
But the episode brings up melancholy recollections of the intensive drive made on the Mediterranean fruit fly in Florida several years ago. Many persons lent a willing hand to the destruction of orchards and other measures to eradicate the pest, at the cost of several million dollars.

But the last we heard of the Mediterranean fruit fly in Florida was an acrimonious debate
as to whether there ever had been any Mediterranean fruit flies in the state. Certainly there were two schools of thought on the subject, and so far as we know there still are. But anyway, there can be no difference of opinion as to what happened to the money. It was spent.

Prophecy on the War in Africa.

It is suggested that the conflict in Ethiopia makes timely a reading or rereading of Dr.
Samuel Johnson's "Rasselas, Prince of Abyssinia," because this tale (which the author wrote to pay the funeral expenses of his mother) is not only a great and often overlooked classic but contains a prophecy of flying, an imaginary picture of "an army sailing through the clouds" against which "neither walls nor mountains nor seas could afford any security." It also pictures "a flight of northern savages" who "might hover in the wind and light at once with irresistible violence upon the capital of a fruitful region that was rolling under them."

We are indebted to the Toledo Blade for recalling these strikingly fulfilled prophecies.
But while there is to be no deduction from their aptness or from the value of "Rasselas" on its own account, it must be observed that there are zealous readers who are prepared to cite Biblical prophecies not only of the airplane, but of the motor car, the railroad train and even the radio. We leave it to those who may be so interested to find the passages in question.

As for ourselves, we are short on prophecy and on reading it into ancient classics. But if there are those who desire a more pleasing advance report on flying dating back a century and nearly seventy years ahead of the Wright brothers, they might look into Tennyson's

"Locksley Hall" and find this:
Saw the heavens fill with commerce, argosies
of magic sails,
Pilots of the purple twilight, dropping down with costly bales,
But the same prophet also Heard the heavens fill with shouting, and there rain'd a ghastly dew
From the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue.
The conflict would continue Till the war drum throb'd no longer, and the battle-flags were fur'd
In the Parliament of man, the federation of the world.

Now that last could mean only the final triumph of the League of Nations!

Legislating Patriotism.

If laws may be relied upon to produce loyalty to one's country and the ideals for which it stands, Massachusetts must be the most patriotic state in the union. Two recent cases of resistance have done much to dramatize the extent to which legislators have attempted to enforce at least lip service to the American flag and the Constitution in the Bay State.

An eminent Harvard professor, Kirtley F.
Mather, who was a captain of engineers in the World War, at first declined to take a special teachers' oath to the Constitution, lately prescribed by the Massachusetts legislature, on the ground that by implication it reflected unfairly on the natural patriotism of the teaching profession. Being a reasonable man who can see issues in perspective, Professor Mather has since agreed to take the oath, in order not to involve his university in a legal battle, but he, like a great many other intelligent persons, is still opposed to this futile method of testing the patriotism of his colleagues, although some other states have adopted similar laws.

In Lynn, Mass., a small boy has refused to salute the flag once every five days, as required by law in the schools of the state. In so doing, of course, he was not expressing his own personal conviction on the subject, since he is too young to have one, but apparently was obeying the instructions of his father, who belongs to a religious sect opposed to the saluting of any emblem except that of God. An absurd battle of principles has resulted, with the Massachusetts law so far having gotten rather distinctly the worst of it.

The fact is that patriotism cannot be reduced satisfactorily to a matter of observing certain forms, as this zealous state legislature seems to believe. Professor Mather is none the less a worthy American for opposing, not the ideals of the Constitution (for which he has proved himself ready to fight), but what he considers an unjust and foolish law, requiring him to give a demonstration of his allegiance. And the little boy in Lynn probably will grow up into a patriotic citizen if the schools of Massachusetts teach him the truths and liberties for which the flag stands, instead of concentrating on a salute that a potential traitor can give with the greatest of ease.

KANSAS NOTES.

The McPherson Republican is confident the Perhaps, George Veneberg suggests in the AHA, A JUVENILE.

We do not wish to appear frivolous regarding another's misfortune, but in view of the state-younger he grows each year, when we heard of the first thought that struck us was the youthful senator had fallen off his bicycle or had a mishap with his roller skates. We later learned he had suffered his injuries in a motor car accident.—Lloyd Griffith in Greenleaf Sentinel.

BOWIE KNIFE WAS USED FOR THE FIRST TIME IN FIGHT ON BANKS OF THE MISSISSIPPI

Strangely Shaped Blade Takes Its Name From a Natchez, Miss., Man Who Put It to Deadly Employ in the Aftermath of a Bloodless Duel More Than a Century Ago—He Died, Himself, at the Alamo, Using His Weapon in a Futile Defense Against the Mexicans.

THE date was September 19, 1827, early morning. From the river mist on the banks of the Father of Waters at Natchez, Miss., twelve gentlemen, all armed, boarded a ferry boat to be transferred to a sand bar on the opposite shore. There two of the party were to fight a duel. The other ten were seconds, surgeons and friends of the two duellists, equally divided. The names of the two principals, though known, matter little; the one main fact that made the journey historically important was that the duel wound up in a bloody free for all and marked the debut of the dreaded Bowie knife in the world of fighting men.

COL. JAMES BOWIE, FROM WHOM THE FAMOUS BOWIE KNIFE DERIVED ITS NAME.

Col. James Bowie, later to die as a hero of the Alamo, was present as a friend of Samuel C. M. Wells, one of the duellists. Among the friends of the other principal, Dr. Thomas H. Maddox, a gossip physician whose wagging tongue brought on the trouble, was Maj. Norris Wright, Bowie's most bitter enemy.

It was a strange mixture of hatreds and stanch loyalties carried over to the sand bar that morning of September 19, more than 100 years ago. Beside Bowie, Wells had in his group his brother, Thomas Jefferson Wells; Gen. Samuel Cuny, George C. McWhorter and Dr. Cuny, surgeon and brother of General Cuny. On the opposite side were Major Wright, Col. Robert H. Crain, Alfred and Carey Blanchard, brothers, relatives of Colonel Crain, and Dr. Denny, a surgeon.

THE HATES WERE MANY.

Oddly enough, the two groups were almost paired off, enemy for enemy. Bowie hated Wright and Wright hated Bowie, their trouble starting when the bank of which Wright was a director, refused Bowie a large loan necessary to save some valuable property. Bowie learned Wright's objections were the principle reasons for the refusal to grant the loan. Then the two became political enemies as well, and one day in Alexandria their feud broke violently. No one knows exactly how the affair started, but surviving records say witnesses saw Bowie, advancing bareheaded on Wright. The latter drew a pistol and fired. The bullet glanced off Bowie's ribs and then Bowie closed in. He was beating Wright to death with his fists when friends of the two parted them. But all knew it was merely a question of time before one killed the other. Bowie was a powerful man, standing well over six feet, and while Wright was small, he had the reputation of being one of the best pistol shots in Rapides Parish. He had fought five duels, killing his opponents in two and dangerously wounding his adversaries in the others.

Then take Colonel Crain and General Cuny. Crain was one of those proud souls who preferred dueling to paying his debts. Already he had killed one man for insisting on payment and had been wounded by General Cuny for refusing to pay a note for $10,000 made by him and, unfortunately, endorsed by Cuny's father. The elder Cuny, a man of honor, had paid the note and the son had taken up the matter with the fire-eating colonel, wounding him in the arm.

Look now upon Thomas Jefferson Wells and Alfred Blanchard. The Cuny and Wells families were old friends, and Bowie was a firm friend of the Wells brothers. And the Blanchards were related by marriage to the graceless Colonel Crain. One night Alfred Blanchard, in a drunken rage, took a pot shot at Thomas Jefferson Wells, wounding him.

DR. MADDOX'S LONE PATIENT.

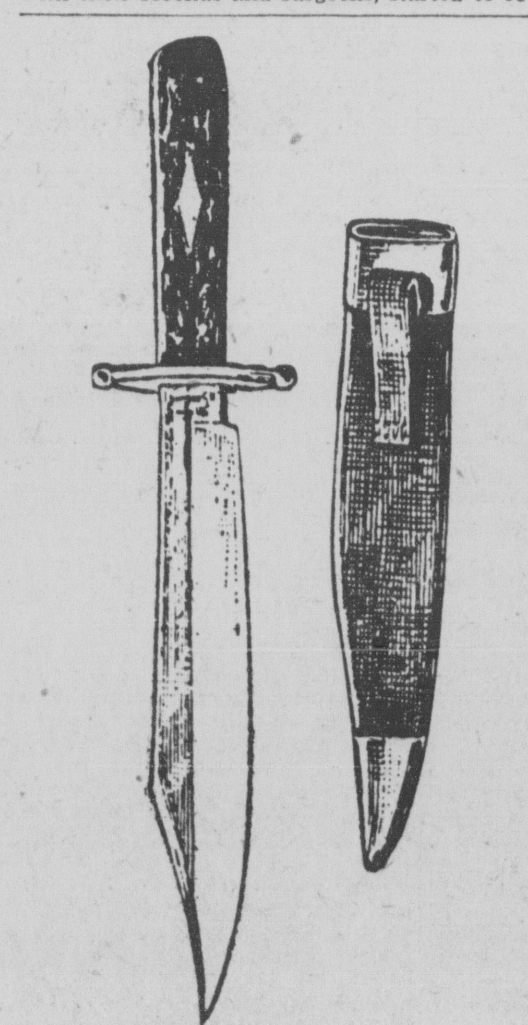

Dr. Maddox, the gossip physician, newly arrived in Rapides, found one patient—"lady" is the only identification that survives—who had a choice bit of scandal to relate concerning Gen. Montfort Wells, elder brother of Samuel and Thomas. Maddox repeated the story and it spread through the parish like wildfire. Presently General Wells called upon Dr. Maddox and demanded the name of his informant. Meantime the "lady," terrified by the trouble she had started, had obtained the doctor's promise he would not disclose her name. This promise the doctor kept. He refused the general's demands. Hot words passed and the general departed.

The two met soon after on the streets of Alexandria. Wells was carrying a shotgun. The general blazed away, but being a notoriously poor shot and with eyesight none too good, he missed the doctor completely and hit a man on the other side of the street. The name of the victim of this trivial mistake does not survive.

Of course no doctor could go about in that day dodging shots. There was only one course open to him under the code of honor then extant: He sent in his challenge. Samuel Levi Wells, knowing the general would have small chance in a duel with anyone, sent an acceptance in his stead. He would be happy, he informed the physician, to meet Dr. Maddox in his brother's place. Their seconds met, the time and place was agreed upon—the duel was to be fought on the sand bar at Vidalia, across the river from Natchez. And in the dawn the two sets of bitter enemies started out.

BOTH DUELISTS MISSED.

By agreement, all but the two duellists, their seconds and the two surgeons were to remain by a cluster of willows by the shore end of the bar while the duel was in progress half a mile away on a long stretch of level sand. After the formalities demanded by the occasion were completed, Wells and Dr. Maddox faced each other at ten paces. At the command, both fired—and missed. They tried again with the same fortunate results. Apologies then were offered and accepted, the two shook hands and, with their seconds and surgeons, started to return to the willow grove for the proper refreshments the happy outcome demanded. It was at this moment that Bowie and General Cuny, probably in thoughtless violation of the agreement governing the conduct of the accompanying friends of the two principals, strode out on the sand bar. The other group stirred and strode forward also. Cuny saw

BOWIE KNIFE AND SHEATH.

Wright and Crain coming toward him. Probably thinking of the defaulted Crain note his father had been compelled to pay, he challenged the colonel. "Now," he said, drawing a pistol, "is as good a time to settle our differences as any!" Crain, carrying two guns, drew one and fired, hitting Bowie in the hip. Cuny then fired at Crain, the ball striking him in the arm. Crain's shot from his second pistol mortally wounded Cuny, the general dying a few minutes later. Then came the fight that made the name "Bowie knife" famous.

Armed with only a knife of a peculiar design, Bowie bore down on Crain. The latter paused only to smash a murderous blow at Bowie with his empty pistol, then turned and fled through the willows. Wright, however, unsheathing a cane sword met Bowie's belated rush and ran breaking off in the wound. Desperately injured though he was, Bowie closed with his adversary. His knife flashed twice in mighty sweeps. Wright fell, dead before he struck the ground and Bowie toppled beside him.

At first the doctor's feared there was no chance to save Bowie's life. They returned the desperately wounded man to Natchez, although doubtful he would survive the day. But his magnificent constitution pulled him through, and he found the fame of his peculiarly shaped knife had spread. It was not the sort of fame he relished, and as soon as his wounds had healed sufficiently to put his affairs in order, he moved to Texas, never to return.

There have been a great many stories of the making of the first Bowie knife, one of the most widely circulated being that it was forged by one Manuel, a Negro blacksmith on the Bowie plantation near Alexandria, and from this crude weapon an improved knife was fashioned by one Pedro, famous New Orleans cutler.

The truth of the matter, however, seems to be that the knife used in the battle of the sandbar was fashioned from a design for a hunting knife by Resin P. Bowie, brother of James, at Resin's plantation. It was given by him to James when the latter expressed his admiration of the weapon. And setting at rest reports it was first used in a fight in New Orleans in which Bowie supposedly disemboweled an opponent with one sweep of the blade, he publicly announced that the first time it had ever been used on a human being was when he killed Major Wright, and that it was used then simply because he had no other weapon.

After battle "Bowie knife" was copied by the thousands and became the favorite fighting knife of the South and Southwest—a deadly weapon of sinister aspect and reputation.

Leaving Rapides, Bowie achieved prominence in Texas, where his deeds added a colorful chapter to the state's early history. At the fall of the Alamo, confined to his cot with pneumonia, he propped himself up in bed to meet the final, fatal charge of the Mexican forces with a pistol in his hand and his knife beside him. There in the shrine of Texas the original Bowie knife took its final toll as the enemy paid dearly for his life.

A RICH LEGACY—CHOPPING WOOD.

Odd Terms of $150,000 Bequest Distinguish Freak European Will.

From Answers, London.

One of the strangest wills on record is reported from the continent. A young man has been left $150,000 by his uncle—but only on conditions: No part of the legacy can come to him except in the form of firewood, which he has to chop with his own hands before he is allowed to sell it. The sales, too, must be made by the heir himself.

Another nephew is appointed by the will to see that these conditions are fulfilled. If they are broken, this second nephew can claim the fortune involved.

One of the most ingeniously annoying wills ever made consisted of a series of envelopes, marked "To be opened twelve months from today," "To be opened two years from today," and so on. When, ten years after the death of the testator, the last of the envelopes was opened, the relatives, who had been kept for so long on tenterhooks, learned that the fortune they coveted was to be allowed to accumulate for 100 years before being distributed.

A "LITTLE MAGAZINE" OF 1897.

Rummaging through his attic recently, Marco Morrow of Topeka, assistant publisher of the Capper publications, found a sample of literature and art as they were practiced in Kansas City nearly forty years ago. The sample was a little magazine called "The Lotus," published here by the Hudson-Kimberly Publishing Company in February, 1897. Walter Blackburn Harte, whom Mr. Morrow remembers as "an erratic writer of some parts," was editor, and Alfred Houghton Clark, later a member of The Star's art staff and for the last several years a resident of New Mexico, was art director. He drew everything in the magazine except a cover design by Hattie E. Crippen.

The Lotus was a product of the "little magazine" days; it was about 4 inches by 8, and contained thirty pages of reading matter, of distressingly small type. The little Kansas City magazine was a contemporary of the Chap Book of Chicago and of Elbert Hubbard's Philistine, published at East Aurora, N. Y. The Lotus took vigorous cracks at both of these rivals. The Chap Book was criticized as not containing "a single American feature or writer," and "the Philistine drew down the wrath of the Lotus because Hubbard had run an advertisement suggesting that the Kansas City magazine might be published any minute. It already had reached volume 3, No. 2, a fair longevity, all things considered.

Three short stories, all dripping with tragedy, covered the fictional field in the February Lotus. Mr. Morrow wrote one, having to do with a camp meeting that was rained out and a pallid young hero who was drowned trying to rescue a young woman who neither needed nor deserved rescue. C. W. Doyle had a yarn in the Rudyard Kipling manner; scene, India; a child is eaten by a leopard and a money lender gets murdered. The other piece, by George S. Cottman, was about a gentleman whose love was not returned, and he and she felt badly about it ever after.

A half dozen poets saw their brain children in print in the Lotus that month; they were H. M. Williams, David Skaats Foster, Edward W. Barnard, Claude E. Bragdon, St. George Best and William F. Barnard. Mr. Foster's effort was labeled humorous verse, and had to do with a romantic episode in Venice, Mr. Clark, the 1-man art department, came to the front with a silhouette of the ducal palace in Venice. It had nothing to do with the "humorous verse," except they both were in Venice, but it was good clean art.

The most interesting thing in the magazine was a review by Harte, the editor, of a book of short stories, "The Real Issue," by William Allen White. Mr. White was then a very young author.

"At this moment of moral ferment in literature on both sides of the Atlantic," wrote Harte, "there comes out of Kansas a book which holds the sunshine and darkness of life. It gives us pictures of existence in conditions unfamiliar to most readers, with a directness of presentation of the human passions unafraid of any taboo. At this time there is a strong disposition to scoff at the possibilities of any individual and artistic achievement in America, owing to the rude conditions and the vulgarizing force of everything in life being more or less subordinated to the commercial traffic. This is growing to be the view of the educated classes, who look to England. It is encouraging, therefore, to see a writer suddenly appear who takes hold of the very rude conditions the dietetic looks upon as so barren and by the fine tact and magic of artistic feeling and insight holds up the older drama of life, the story of the heart and mind.

"Here is one man in the West who can use English with a swing, with his blood and his heart seething in the joy of it all."

The Chaperon

Questions on social customs, beauty aids and affairs that come up daily in the experience of busy people will receive prompt answers Mondays from the Chaperon.

I NEVER fuss. Little things don't matter." So said Mrs. Glenna Collett Vane, national woman golf champion, in an interview recently. She was accounting for how she found time to do so much—be a golf champion, write books, be a mother, a wife, the mistress of a big house, besides half a dozen other interests which take time. Quite without knowing it, she then and there added one more thing to her accomplishments—preaching a sermon.

"I never fuss. Little things don't matter." It was preached in just those few words. And how many people, women especially, need it. How many lives are worn out long before they should be, stewing over every little thing that happens in the day, and even crossing bridges before they come to them in order to fuss more. Yet all it ever accomplishes is to rob the fretters of serenity, and burn up a lot of energy and nerve power which might be conserved, controlled and put to use in the bigger, more important things only, where it would really do some good.

Long ago it was proven that the motor car driver who dashed along noticing all the little things in the way and risking his own life and the necks of everyone else, really reached his destination no quicker than the driver who went along at a steady pace, sure and serene. Well, life ought to be like that, too. A steady driving toward the end to be accomplished, without deviating to take notice of the things the dasher is always seeing, driving on and over and around recklessly, by the one who keeps his objective just as surely and much more safely, by the one who keeps his objective in mind and goes steadily toward it, disregarding the little things that don't matter. The dasher simply makes more splutter and that is all, unless it be a nervous wreck of himself to no purpose in the end.

"I never fuss. Little things don't matter." Take Glenna Collett's sermon to heart. Watch yourself for just one month and see how many things you fuss about that are really of no consequence at all. See how many high mountains you make of tiny molehills. You can test them by their importance to your life a week, or even two or three days later. By then you probably will have forgotten all about them. So were they worth the importance you briefly gave them? It is the little things, the little annoyances, the little disagreeables, frictions, fears, disappointments that eat time. They do steal from you time and thought and energy you could be giving to the bigger things you want to accomplish. If you want to succeed and triumph, let them slide and see how much more you get done without them.

Dear Chaperon: My wife and I have been married thirteen years. In that time there has not been anything but harmony and faithful devotion between us. Even today we are staunchly devoted to each other and were it not for financial troubles we would be the world's champion happy couple. But now there has arisen something which threatens our happiness and it is leading us into arguments which I fear will wreck our home.

My wife left her home in Maine when she married me. Prospects for a young man were good then, and with her consent to live in the middle West, I gave my promise that she should return to Maine for visits every few years. She did go for a visit the year after we were married. But since then I have not been able to pay for visits. Our family numbers six now and we have been almost destitute the last three or four years. It takes all I can do to buy our food, and even then we are not well-fed by any means. We can't buy clothes any more.

Through all this my wife has been cheerful and patient and few women have gone without comforts and necessities, or tried to make the best of a bad situation with better grace than she. I realize how exceptional a wife and mother she has been.

But now she says we must go East for a visit. This is her argument: We are merely existing here. There are no immediate prospects of bettering ourselves in any way if we stay here. Her mother is getting old and failing in health. She wants to see her grandchildren. She lives on a small farm near a city and offers us her hospitality until we find a location for ourselves. If we decide to stay there, a relative with business influence offers to find me a job if I'll come. My wife wants to see her mother. It is only for a visit. She thinks eleven years is too long to stay away and is afraid we will stay too long. If we go and decide to stay we have the privilege of living by ourselves on a piece of land rent free, where my wife insists we can have a cow, chickens, a garden and fuel, and still be close to my work in the city. To her this is a dream of paradise compared to the little back-woods country community. I'll admit that weather conditions here the last four years have prevented me from raising anything to eat and circumstances have certainly been against us.

But, with times like they are, I argue that when we have a house and lot of our own to stay in, poor though it is, we had better not leave it for something uncertain. Above all, I argue that if I can't make a living here where I am known, how could I hope to earn one in a strange place, even with relatives to help me? Besides, I would have to borrow money to make the trip. Some day, when times get better and I could afford to go without getting into debt, I would be glad to take the family, and perhaps even live there. But wife says we can't wait for all that to come. She says we can pack the family into a car, leave this home and lot, and make the trip anyway.

Now which one of us is right?

Mr. STAY-AT-HOME.
Your wife is.
Eleven years is a long time to work and slave uncomplainingly without a sight of her mother. It is true that her mother may not live until you think you are able to go see her.

If, in eleven years—not all depression years nor bad weather years—you have been unable to give your family comforts or even necessities, there seems little hope that you will in the next eleven, or ever. Naturally she revolts at this, as any other long-suffering woman would.

The situation would be entirely different if you were prospering where with her mother in the last years of her life.

I'm afraid part of the trouble is just that you hate the thought of parting with your home because you dread the upheaval and leaving a place you are used to. Yet nothing venture, nothing gain, and the change might be the turning point of your life.

The children will at least have as many advantages as they have here, your good wife will be given her chance at what she thinks of as paradise and there seems no real reason why she shouldn't. Why not rent your home and try it a year, anyhow, and see what happens?

Mrs. J. A. Russell: These are the different wedding anniversaries:

1 year—Paper.
5 years—Wood.
10 years—Tin.
15 years—Crystal.
20 years—China.
25 years—Silver.
50 years—Gold.
75 years—Diamond.

Worried: Pimples seldom come from external causes unless they are a skin disease. Give yourself a thorough internal cleansing, watch your diet and give time a chance.

Blackheads are the result of clogged pores and are enlarged by creams, powders and the natural oil and soil. They are hard to eradicate. Try scrubbing your face with hot water and soap. Put about ten drops of tincture of benzoin in the water. Rinse and then either dash with the coldest water possible or rub with a small piece of ice in a clean cloth dipped frequently in witch-hazel. This will help, but will not work wonders in a few weeks. Keep at it.

Anxious to Know: The feeling you should care for your mother even though you have two brothers who help, is fine and commendable. But it should not be carried to the point where it crowds out all thought of marriage.

You certainly should take "running around more seriously," even though perfectly happy just now, not so much with an eye to matrimony, but because it is better for a girl of your age to have some normal fun in her life. If she happens to meet the one man while she is at it, so much the better. A child should be dutiful before and after marriage, but does not owe the sacrifice of his or her whole future to parents.

Disgusted With Life: Half of forgiving is forgetting. If you really love your husband and are unhappy without him, now that he is behaving himself and contrite, take him at his word and make yourself believe him. He needs help just now instead of doubt and it depends largely on you which way he finally goes. If you rehash his shortcomings and mistakes endlessly he will soon get tired of it and be reckless. If you go all the way in your forgiveness, he doubtless will live up to your hopes.

C. O. Patton: I am sorry but cannot make requests for stamps in these columns. There is nothing personal about it, you may be sure. It just can't be done because soon there would be so many requests there would be room for little else.

Brown Eyes No. 30: There is no law against the marriage of relatives by marriage who are, after all, just the courtesy kind and have no blood-tie at all. But can't you find someone your own age or a little older?

What to Do: If you were a little less blindly infatuated you would see that the girl you think you love so much is not the right sort, in the first place, or she would have kept herself above reproach in her relations with you. Your idea of the solution of the problem is wild and ridiculous. Forget it and forget her unless she proves more worthy in every way and you can do the thing honorably.

By the way, you do not present a very fine spectacle yourself. A man who really loves a woman will protect her even from himself. You didn't, then suggested the very part you now deplore, and when in the interim, somebody else appears in her life, you are up in arms and even ready to entertain thoughts of killing him.

Working hard on yourself to make yourself a better man will not only be good for you but will help you forget something you threw away of your own accord.

Jerry: You are quite right. A dinner and cards for several, including this man, would be a gracious and tactful way of letting him know you are well enough to accept social engagements again.

Broken-Hearted: Hearts don't permanently break at 14 and should not enter into the picture at all.

You are entirely too young to be having love affairs and really should still be playing with dolls. Go in for sports and having some fun and don't let yourself become silly over nothing at all.

Merice B.: You simply have let yourself get too self-centered and not made the effort to be kind, cordial and receptive to other people. Your treatment of the friendly overtures of the son of the woman who visited at your home was atrociously rude. It was like slapping him in the face when he offered you a friendly hand.

You will hear from him no more and small wonder. Make yourself kind and gracious and get to work at something, no matter what. Sitting at home speculating about yourself and your shortcomings is a poor way of spending your time.

I assume you live in a small town where the storekeepers are also the clerks. Take your courage in your hands and apply for the work you want. You will be asked your qualifications and you can tell what you can do.

A. N. Y.: If the mildew is on white goods, boil in javelle water, directions for which are to be found on the can of chloride of lime. Or with lemon juice and salt and expose to the sun. THE CHAPERON
